41 Burned to Death As Rail Motor Coach, Freight Crash Head-on

'Doodlebug' Hurled Back 200 Yards; Gasoline Bathes Wreck in Flames

(Picture on Page 12)

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio, July 31.—A head-on collision with a freight train crushed a Pennsylvania Railroad gasoline-electric coach into ruins tonight and carried 41 persons to flaming death.

Railroad officials said the coach, shuttling from Hudson, Ohio, to Akron, unexplainedly failed to take a sidetrack to allow the double-engined, 73-car freight train to pass.

All those killed were in the steel coach, whose gasoline tanks, bursting at the deafening impact, turned the car into a fiery trap.

All the passengers died.

The engineman and conductor of the coach leaped to safety, but were severely injured. Another trainman, riding home "deadhead," also lived to tell of the tragedy. Recapitulation five hours after the collision, which occurred at 6 p. m., indicated these were the only survivors.

Two Injured on Engine

The engine crews of the two freight locomotives were injured, apparently not seriously.

The "deadheading" trainman who survived was Tod Wonn, 24, of Akron, brought here with leg and arm injuries.

He said Conductor H. B. Shaffer of the coach came running into the baggage compartment, crying:

"'We are going to crash!'"

"The conductor leaped and I followed him.

"My clothing caught fire.

Charles Taylor, who lived two blocks from the scene, told the following story:

"I heard what I thought was an explosion by a rumbling noise. A few minutes later I heard ambulance sirens and I raced to the scene.

"The first thing I saw was firemen playing water on a Pennsylvania coach which was half wrapped around the front of a double-header freight train. The coach was burning furiously, with flames licking around the top.

Bodies Scattered Around

"The fuel in the gasoline coach had exploded and caught fire when hit by the freight train.

"The firemen played water on the wreckage for three-quarters of an hour before they could get to the bodies.

"I could see inside the coach. Seats and bodies were scattered around. Bodies were wedged in the windows and we could see legs and arms hanging outside.

"The freight train had plowed half way through the 'doodlebug.'

The Rains Came

Brief Thundershower Routs Worst Heat Wave Since 1930

Weatherman Predicts 86 Maximum Temperature for Today; Tomorrow Will Be Moderate, Says Forecaster

The Weather Man last night promised Washington two days of relatively moderate temperatures, with 86 his prediction for today's highest reading.

The forecast is "fair and somewhat cooler" for today, and for tomorrow "fair with moderate temperatures."

A brief but heavy thunderstorm at 6:50 o'clock last night swiftly toppled the official thermometer from 90 to 76 degrees.

If, as expected, a new mass of cool air moves over the city today it will be but the second day since July 19 that the thermometer has failed to hit 90.

In the last 13 days the thermometer has failed to reach 90 but once, and that was on July 24 when the maximum reading was 89.

The Weather Bureau said last night that for duration and almost unbroken intensity the heat wave has been the worst the city has experienced since the 1930 drought when temperatures of 90 or more were reported for 12 consecutive days in July and for considerable periods in August.

The record for consecutive days of 90-degree temperatures is 14, established during August, 1900. During the 1930 drought, the thermometer stood at 100 or higher on 11 days.

Two heat prostrations were reported yesterday. Herbert Brady, 29, of Landover, Md., was brought to Casualty Hospital from his home by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Edward Y. Payne, 60, of 1507 C street southeast, was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Warren Named 'Watch Dog' Of Treasury

President to Send His Nomination To Senate Today

President Roosevelt yesterday selected Representative Lindsay C. Warren, of North Carolina, who successfully steered his reorganization legislation through the House, to the key fiscal post as Comptroller General.

Mr. Roosevelt will send Warren's nomination to the Senate today, White House press secretary Stephen Early told reporters.

After declining the office in 1936 and 1938, the 50-year-old House leader this time will accept the $10,000, 15-year appointment which carries with it the assignment of standing guard over the billions being appropriated for defense.

A recommendation that the salary be increased to $15,000 in keeping with the importance attached by the Administration to the Comptroller's "watch dog" role during the next few years of heavy spending, is expected to follow soon after the appointment.

Former Senator Fred H. Brown, who retired as Comptroller because of illness, meanwhile has been named to the Tariff Commission. Brown's appointment was approved yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee.

Standing between the Government departments and the taxpayers in seeing to it that peak appropriations are spent within the law, Warren as an agent of Congress will be expected to work out a water-tight system of safeguards that will guarantee against recurrence of graft charges that followed rush World War outlays.

It was the President's first gesture to the South since the Chicago con-

Ex-Governor White of Ohio Bolts to Willkie

Hardee, Former Florida Executive, Also Joins Revolt

Special Dispatch to The Post

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 31. Former Gov. George White, of Ohio, led the list of today's Democrats pledging their support to Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee.

Word was received here from Columbus, Ohio, that White, who served as Democratic National Chairman in the 1920 campaign when Franklin D. Roosevelt was the Vice Presidential nominee, had issued a statement saying:

"As an American, believing in a free democracy, I cannot bring myself to vote for President Roosevelt for a third term."

White, a delegate to the recent Democratic National convention in Chicago which renominated Mr. Roosevelt, added:

"In 1932, I believed in Mr. Roosevelt and whole-heartedly supported him. As Governor of Ohio, I actively cooperated with President Roosevelt and the New Deal on an emergency basis.

"In 1936, I supported and voted for the President for a second term with mental reservations, fearing he would make the emergency permanent. . . .

"As a Jeffersonian Democrat I can and will vote for Wendell Willkie.

"If, in so doing, I am inconsistent with the vote of the Ohio delegation in the Chicago convention, I can only say that I hold conscience above consistency, especially after the manner in which the third nomination was put over, and many other delegates feel the same way I do."

He was chairman of the Democratic National Committee from

House Chiefs Scuttle D. C. Self-Rule

Democrats Believe Passage of National Representation Would Cover Pledge

By James D. Secrest

House leaders have sidetracked the move for District self-government and have decided that the Democratic platform pledge can be fulfilled by enacting the Sumners national representation resolution, it was learned yesterday.

The House Judiciary Committee today will resume consideration of the Sumners bill to amend the Constitution to permit the District to elect Representatives in Congress and to choose Presidential electors.

Confronted with a hostile Congress and the reputed opposition of President Roosevelt himself, suffrage on local matters for the National Capital apparently has no better chance of becoming a reality than it did before the Democratic convention.

The House Judiciary Committee is contemplating no steps to bring local suffrage to the floor, and the House District Committee has dropped the whole matter for this session.

While Chairman Randolph of the District Committee was out of the city, there were reliable reports that House leaders have told him not to attempt to bring out a local self-rule measure. One of their reasons, it is stated on good authority, is that President Roosevelt has advised leaders in the suffrage fight that he is definitely opposed to self-government for the residents of Washington.

First Lady Favors Vote

Local suffrage sponsors on Capitol Hill point out that even if Congress should pass the Sumners resolution by a two-thirds majority, as is necessary, that there is no assurance either that the necessary 36 States would ratify the proposed constitutional amendment or that Congress would grant the District national representation.

The Sumners resolution, they point out, would merely remove any Constitutional bar to national representation, but would leave entirely with Congress the decision whether the privilege should be extended and the power to revoke it, once given.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt reiterated her indorsement of District suffrage at her Hyde Park home yesterday as Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, indorsed the Sumners resolution and Chairman Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, expressed his personal approval of national representation.

King is for Sumners Measure

Representative Randolph obtained a statement from Mrs. Roosevelt during a luncheon for the Arthurdale Committee.

"Mrs. Roosevelt authorizes me to state," he telegraphed, "that she is happy the Democratic Party has recognized through its platform that democratic processes should operate in the District of Columbia, as well

Draft Limited to Men 21 to 31; House Votes 19,000 Airplanes, 2 Navies, Arms for 1,200,000

$5,000,000,000 Defense Supplement Rushed to Senate; Profit Limit Lifted

By John B. Oakes

In less than two and a half hours, and with only one dissenting vote, the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the gigantic supplementary national defense bill providing $5,000,000,000 to build a two-ocean navy, equip an army of 1,200,000 men and procure 19,000 planes.

Besides making possible vast expansion of the armed forces, the bill boosts the limitation on profits on airplane contracts to 12 per cent from the 8 per cent level established five weeks ago in the naval "speed-up" bill. Shipbuilding profits will continue to be limited to 8 per cent.

In addition, the measure repeals a provision that had been inserted in the "speed-up" bill granting the President power to take over and operate private plants if necessary for national defense purposes. This important clause in the bill had apparently slipped through the House without the knowledge of all members of the Naval Affairs committee, in the last minute rush before recess for the Republican National Convention.

In proposing its repeal, Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee said it gave the President too broad authority in a time of "limited emergency."

Marcantonio Shouts "No"

The defense bill, which would have passed unanimously had it not been for the emphatic "no" shouted by Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, grants the Army and Navy $2,234,191,957 in direct appropriations and $2,728,960,000 in contract authorizations, making the total $4,963,151,957.

Of this, the Army would get $3,911,995,417, and the Navy, $1,051,156,540. The bill raises to more than $10,000,000,000 the national defense appropriations this session—and to $14,000,000,00 the eventual cost of the whole program.

The measure is intended to:

(1) Build up the Navy so that it can "meet any possible combination of hostile naval forces," by starting some 200 new vessels of war;

(2) Complete total equipment for a land force of 1,200,000 men;

(3) Procure reserve stocks of tanks, guns, artillery and ammunition for a total of 2,000,000 men;

(4) Provide for manufacturing facilities to produce "critical items" of equipment for an army of 2,000,000 men, and guns, bombs, etc., for Army and Navy aircraft;

(5) Procure 15,000 additional planes for the Army and 4,000 for the Navy, together with spare engines and equipment bringing

Envoy Extraordinary

Strange Case of Dr. Westrick: Hitler's Influential Man in U. S.

Stream of Humble and Highly Placed Citizens Flows to Home of Mysterious German; Known to Be Law Partner of World War Spy

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, July 31.—The mystery of the movements and activities of Dr. Gerhardt Alois Westrick since his arrival in this city in early April as the special emissary of Adolf Hitler ostensibly to see that the economic ties between the United States and Germany remain unbroken through the European war, has now been at least partially solved.

WESTRICK

Although registered as a resident of the Waldorf-Astoria since June 17, Dr. Westrick has established himself and his family since May 6, with every effort at secrecy, on the Scarsdale estate of Harold A. Callan. Since his advent here, say the neighbors, the driveway has fairly buzzed with streams of automobile visitors and on some days, it is said, the place takes on the semblance of a busy roadhouse.

Judging from the license numbers noted on some of these cars, Dr. Westrick's visitors appear to have been of an unusually diverse character, running from factory workers and mechanics to nationally known industrialists and oil firm executives. It is understood that to some of these Dr. Westrick has painted glowing pictures of the great business that a friendly United States will get from Germany as soon as Great Britain is cleaned up. The nature of his business with his more modestly placed visitors can only be conjectured.

Actually Here to Enlist Sympathy for Nazis

It is learned, however, from reliable sources, that although Dr. Westrick has been accredited here as commercial counselor to the German Embassy, he has had little to do with things of a strictly commercial nature since his arrival in the United States. It is asserted that Dr. Westrick is really here as the personal agent of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, of whom he has been an intimate for years, to spread sentiment as best he can in favor of Germany.

To assist him in this activity Dr. Westrick, it was found, has the aid of Baroness Irmingard von Wagenheim, a relative of von Ribbentrop by marriage. The baroness is a comely woman in her middle forties who represents herself as the secretary to Dr. Westrick.

The baroness usually tells inquirers that "perhaps the doctor will be in next Tuesday." She is understood, however, to be of greater use to Dr. Westrick in guiding and introducing him in the proper social circles.

Aside from the large number of automobile visitors noted at the Scarsdale home, the neighbors and local authorities have been considerably disturbed over a mysterious signal system which the doctor operates from the place. At various hours of the day and night there hangs from a second floor window over the front entrance of the house a large white placard about 15 inches square bearing a large capital G. So often has this sign been seen intermittently and at such unusual hours that the neighbors have come to call the place, "The Sign of The G." Its significance or purpose remains a mystery.

Listed by Embassy as Commercial Counselor

The sign was first noted by the neighbors some few days before June 16. Sometimes, it was declared, the G would be in blue, at other times in black. It would appear at any hour of the day or night and would disappear after an hour or two. Sometimes it would be observed for an entire afternoon.

Among the more important people with whom Dr. Westrick has come in contact here, it was apparent that executives of the Texas Co., one of the country's biggest oil firms, have been especially attentive to Dr. Westrick.

Shortly after his arrival in the city this company placed one of its Buick cars at his disposal. This car, with the license number 9C7097, was observed in Dr. Westrick's driveway on May 30 last and the license, it appears from the records at Albany, had been issued to the Texas

Rising Opposition Forces Committee To Yield Point On Conscription

By Hedley Donovan

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday voted unanimously to limit registration for compulsory military training to men from 21 to 31 years old.

Under the Burke-Wadsworth bill, as originally drafted, all men from 18 to 64, numbering 42,000,000, would have been required to register.

The latest modification of the bill, interpreted as a concession in the face of mounting opposition to conscription, came shortly after Secretary of War Stimson had urged immediate passage of the measure on the grounds that defeat of Britain would confront this country with "grave danger" of a Nazi attack.

Stimson Urges Speed

Stimson, testifying before the House Military Affairs Committee, said the United States "must take into account the possibility that England may be conquered within 30 days and her fleet come under enemy control." If Hitler overwhelms Britain, he said, the naval power at the Nazis' disposal will outclass the United States fleet in every category, while the German shipbuilding capacity would be six times as great as the American.

"That's why its prudent to begin preparing your land power, because it's likely to be called into consideration," Stimson added. "We have seen that Mr. Hitler doesn't take much time when he moves."

Stimson was asked by Representative Clason (Republican), of Massachusetts:

"Do I understand you think the United States is in imminent danger of direct attack by Germany?"

The witness said he could not go into the definition of "direct attack," but asserted that "there is a very grave danger of attack on the United States if England falls."

Nazis Conscript

Stimson displayed irritation at several points during his questioning and, when asked to comment on proposals that the voluntary enlistment system be given further trial, observed:

"All this talk of wait, wait, wait, and we're confronted with an enemy who doesn't wait."

The Secretary said he is "absolutely certain," an adequate Army cannot be raised by the voluntary method, which he termed a "costly failure."

Stimson contended that the country is now "in far graver peril than we were in June, 1917," when the draft was adopted two months after American entry into the World War.

"Today we are faced with a potential enemy who has not only been using conscription for six years," he added, "but is also putting it into effect on the victims of

Dr. Studebaker Is Recuperating From Fall Injury

Coming out of a health conference, Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, slipped and fell in a corridor of the Interior Building, and fractured his left shoulder.

He was back at his desk yesterday, the day after it happened, wearing a partial cast. So busy is he with the national defense training program of the Nation's schools, that he worked on for several hours after his fall, before going to the doctor.

Mexican Probe Ordered Into Party Of Gen. Almazan

Mexico City, July 31 (AP).—In a preliminary move to determine who won Mexico's turbulent July 7 Presidential and Congressional election, the Federal Attorney General was directed today to investigate charges of "disturbing the public order" against the political party of Presidential Candidate Juan Andreu Almazan.

Gen. Almazan, aggressive independent, and his administration-backed chief rival, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, each claimed "overwhelming victory" in Mexico's heaviest balloting.

The investigation was ordered by the permanent committee of Congress which made the charge against the Almazanists.

France to Seize Riches of Dreyfus And Rothschild

Vichy, France, July 31 (U.P.).—The French government has ordered confiscation of the wealth and private estates of Baron Edouard de Rothschild and Louis Louis-Dreyfus, who hold two of the five great fortunes of France, it was revealed tonight.

Their names were included in the first unofficial list of Frenchmen prominent in finance, journalism and commerce who are to be stripped of their wealth under the Petain regime's recent decree punishing those who fled abroad at the time of France's collapse.

Those named in the list—many of them have fled to the United States—will lose not only their fortunes and property but their French citizenship as well unless they appear and provide "good reasons" for their flight, it was stated.

(The Baron and Baroness de Rothschild, carrying a bag of jewels valued at $1,000,000 and accompanied by their daughter, Bethsabee, arrived in New York, on July 10 aboard the Yankee Clipper from Lisbon after fleeing from the German occupation of Paris.)

Both the Baron de Rothschild, head of the French branch of the famous international banking house, and Louis-Dreyfus, former member of the Chamber of Deputies and importer of South American wheat, were prominent bankers.

Puerto Rico Reports 100,000 Cases of Flu

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 31 (AP).—One hundred thousand cases of influenza, known locally as "monga," were reported today in Puerto Rico, and the National Guard was quarantined for the duration of its three weeks' encampment.

Of the first 52,000 cases, 144 deaths were attributed by physicians to developing pneumonia.

Dr. Edwin H. Lennette, of the Rockefeller Institute, and Dr. John H. Oliphant, of the United States Public Health Service, have been called in for consultation on the epidemic.

Power Failure Blacks Out Capitol

Air-conditioning equipment, lights and elevators in parts of the United States Capitol and the Senate and House Office buildings were shut down for about an hour around 5 p. m. yesterday by a power failure.

Engineers blamed the heavy rain of July 23, which flooded parts of the Capitol basement, damaging power lines. Congress was in recess at the time of the latest failure.

President Uses New Power

Roosevelt Bans Aviation Gas Shipments Outside Hemisphere

President Roosevelt shut off shipment of aviation gasoline yesterday to all countries outside this hemisphere.

The embargo, effective today, was immediately interpreted as a strategic move to deter Japan from further expansion in China and the Far Pacific.

Its force falls heavily, however, on Great Britain, next to defeated France this country's best customer for aviation fuel during the first half of this year.

The embargo, first to be invoked by the President under powers granted him by Congress last month, also prohibits sale of the high-test fuel to a Western Hemisphere nation for resale to Europe, Asia or Africa.

If this clause barring transhipment is enforced, Canada could not funnel aviation gasoline from this country to the warcraft of the British Royal Air Force.

The embargo applies, of course, to Germany and Italy but will not change their supply situation because they have imported no American aviation gasoline this year.

The ban followed by only one week a Presidential proclamation placing aviation gasoline, tetraethyl lead (used to step up gasoline to aviation quality) and scrap iron and steel under export licensing control.

Though the White House move appeared to fall heavily on Great Britain, officials viewed it yesterday as a "method short of war" for use in the struggle with Japan in the Orient.

It conformed, they said, with such recent moves as the State Department protest against Britain's closing of China's Burma supply road, abrogation of the commercial treaty with Japan and continued basing of the U. S. fleet at Hawaii.

"Interests of national defense" inspired the move, White House Sec-

Wedding March a Stampede

Marriages in Virginia Boom On Eve of Pre-Marital Tests

The wedding march became a stampede yesterday as hundreds of couples hurried to Virginia to file applications for marriage in order to escape the premarital medical examination law which goes into effect today.

The rush to the altar began early this month when it was announced that the new law, requiring blood tests for syphilis, would hold up marriages for about five days. The impending conscription, officials said, also speeded up honeymoon plans.

Sixty-two licenses were issued in Alexandria yesterday, raising to 228 the total since Friday. Last couple before the deadline was Dolores N. Deihr, 23, of 3408 Mount Vernon avenue, Alexandria, Census Bureau employe, and Paul N. Cooksey, 23, of 1629 Lang place northeast, laundry company clerk. As many others did, Cooksey explained, they got out the license yesterday in order "to avoid the rigamorole" required under the new law. They'll wed August 24, in Manassas Lutheran Church.

Curiously enough, although most Virginia communities reported an unprecedented number of applications, Arlington and Fairfax counties had nary a license request yesterday.

About a year ago when Maryland established a three-day-wait law to halt "hurry up" marriages, nearby Virginia towns were converted overnight into Gretna Greens. Arlington and Fairfax Counties and Alexandria quickly found legal means for instituting a similar waiting period, but other Virginia areas continued along with get-the-license-and-get-married system.

From now on, marriage license applicants in Virginia must undergo medical examination, and physicians' certificates must be presented to the court clerks.

OF THEE I SING

HATCH ACTORS: Apparently many an office holder is really worried about the new Hatch Act. The document room at the Capitol received 1,000 copies of it one afternoon; within three hours they were all gone.

Harlan Miller

NAIVE PUNDIT: Some of the radio stations seem to turn over their news programs to the office boy. I heard a New York announcer the other evening refer to the mysterious Hitler "peace terms"—which no one has ever heard in detail—as Hitler's appeal to reason, Hitler's own phrase, without any implied quotation marks. As if they really were an appeal to reason.

* * * *

TEN CENTS A BOO: A gentleman who is usually a reliable source before his third high ball told me—with his second highball—that at $3 per booer (boor for short) there was probably about $1,200 worth of subsidized booing in the hall the evening Wallace was nominated. At 30 booes per ward-heeler that came to about 10 cents a boo.

* * * *

FROM A WILD ROSE: Keen-nosed spies of the Dept. of Commerce report that the German Railways are planting along the tracks 400,000 wild rose seedlings, under Berlin orders, for the extraction of Vitamin C. Tush! The real triumph for any kultur would be to extract poison gas from a wild rose.

"—they can alter the symbols"

FREAKS OF NATURE: With an ex-Democrat on the G. O. P. ticket and an ex-Republican on the Democratic ticket, it seems tactless for partisans to toss dead cats at candidates because they weren't born in the party.

All they need to do is to change symbols: An elephant with the head of a donkey, a donkey with the tail of an elephant.

* * * *

BARBED BOUQUET: Henry Wallace has some nice things to say about Senator McNary and his connection with the McNary-Haugen farm bill.

"Yes," says Henry, "when my father was Secretary of Agriculture he induced Mr. McNary to introduce what later became the McNary-Haugen bill."

* * * *

SEC'S $2 FOR WILLKIE: At the rococo Willkie headquarters here on Fifteenth street, a little marble temple which—New Dealers are making much of the fact—used to be a Wall Street broker's office, the proudest gem in their diadem is a $2 contribution from a gentleman who walked in and said he was connected with the SEC, a pet New Deal agency.

* * * *

"Just make the receipt read 'Anonymous, $2,'" he said. "I don't want to lose my job." They showed me the carbon copy of the receipt. There were 94 donations in 48 hours.

* * * *

In the guest book signed by Willkie enthusiasts, some of the pages are headed "We Want Willkie."

"We ought to have that at the head of every page," mused one of the staff.

Also, there's a "D" before some of the signatures, to indicate that the signer was a Democrat.

They want more D's before the signatures, too. I saw three D's among 100 signatures.

ANGRY HAWAIIANS: On the Liberty Limited coming into Washington the other day two Hawaiians hung leis around the necks of everyone in the club car. They'd rather lasso some U. S. Senators with the leis. For they feel Hawaii is getting a raw deal on sugar.

* * * *

Apparently President Roosevelt thinks so, too, to judge from one cryptic comment at a press conference . . . But the New Englanders, Midwesterners and Californians who now run Hawaii are helpless in their rassling with the mainland sugar forces. Leis win kisses, maybe, but few concessions.

* * * *

So they're conducting a plebiscite on statehood next election day; they want two Senators of their own to fight their battles in the Capital. Greatest obstacle: 100,000 Orientals who are good American patriots to their American neighbors, potential spies to foes of Hawaiian sugar.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Overheard in the foyer at the premier of the excellent movie "The Ramparts We Watch:" "When Time Magazine sponsors anything with Timely hullaballoo it's always at least the end of the world or the dawn of a new era." . . . Overheard inside: Isolationists Ham Fish and Senator Ed Johnson congratulating each other on their courage, and scenting war propaganda . . .

13 Officers of Cult Fight Fraud Charges

Los Angeles, July 31 (AP).—Thirteen of 23 indicted officers and members of the "I Am" religious cult pleaded innocent in Federal court today to mail fraud charges in connection with operation of the organization.

Those pleading innocent included Mrs. Edna W. Ballard, widow of the founder, Guy W. Ballard, and Edona Enos Ballard, her son and president of the cult.

Byrnes, Farley Spurn Party Post

Senator Pleads 'Hayfeveritis;' Latter Sticks to Baseball

By Robert C. Albright

Senator James F. Byrnes' hay fever and Postmaster General Farley's baseball dickering had President Roosevelt practically stumped last night in his search for a National Democratic chairman.

Byrnes disqualified himself because of "hay-feveritis" following a two-hour luncheon conference with the President yesterday. And Farley still clung to his baseball club purchase as an out.

But as the Democratic National Committee awaited a White House decision today, the President was reported anxious to assign both Byrnes and Farley to important campaign posts.

Nominal leadership may go to others, but the President's long interview with Byrnes and his continuing talks with Farley indicated how heavily Mr. Roosevelt was banking on these two for campaign aid.

At 6 p. m. last night, Byrnes was called a second time to the White House. After an hour's conference he left by a side door without meeting reporters.

Strategy Board Discussed

Reports of a select strategy board, approximating the Republican campaign setup, continued to circulate as the President delayed a decision. Speculation on who will receive the title of chairman rated prospects in the following order: Frank Walker, former N. E. C. director; Federal Security Administrator McNutt and Leo Crowley, F. D. I. C. chairman.

Leaving the White House, Byrnes, a key third-term manager at Chicago, declined to say what was discussed but insisted that he could not take the job.

"I am one of those hay-feverites," he said. "There is no use explaining to a nonsufferer, but it is enough to make me know that I am incapable of attending to any important business from the last week of August until October. After that I won't have to be drafted to turn up at headquarters."

Might Head Speakers' Bureau

Byrnes, if he sticks by his decision to forego the chairmanship, might be made head of the Democratic speakers' bureau where he can use to campaign advantage his knowledge of people and where they fit in.

Walker, if named chairman, is expected to concentrate on his talent for raising funds and organizing, leaving others to carry the campaign to the hustings.

If the President decides to combine talents for campaigning and organizing in the chairmanship, McNutt might be the man. McNutt left Washington last night without comment. The President alone has the say and even the New Deal high command still thought the choice was wide open.

Farley left New York last night to attend as an "invited guest" today's Democratic subcommittee conference with the President. Persistence of Farley's name in the picture contributed to the uncertainty of the outcome. If Farley at long last says "yes," all other bets are off.

Republicans, meanwhile, with their new national committee already organized and underway, pushed forward on several fronts.

Martin Off to Colorado

Martin appointed Representative Hope, of Kansas, who has seen eye-to-eye with much of the New Deal's farm program, director of the Republican committee's agricultural division. Representative Andresen, of Minnesota, was named assistant director.

Edgar Morris, prominent Washington business man who was seated as a South Carolina delegate at the Philadelphia convention, declared the third-term issue is taking hold in the South. Morris is fighting South Carolina's dual ballot system, which prevents voters from splitting their ballots between Democratic and Republican candidates.

J. Leonard Replogle, Republican National committeeman for Florida, reported at G. O. P. headquarters here that "all our leaders are very optimistic about carrying the State in November for the Willkie-McNary ticket."

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, a minority member of the Burke Judiciary subcommittee on limiting Presidential tenure of office, predicted the American people will "welcome" the opportunity for Senate third-term hearings promised by Senator Burke.

An Informal Dress She Will Wear To Formal Address

ON SHOPPING TOUR—News photographers followed Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie (right) when the Republican nominee's wife went on a shopping tour in Colorado Springs. She confided to Mrs. Jo Haverstock, saleswoman, that she was looking for something to wear at Elwood, Ind., when her husband makes his formal acceptance address August 17

Joining the growing Democratic third-term revolt, Cary A. Hardee, Democratic Governor of Florida from 1921 to 1925, declared in Washington the President was not "drafted" by the Democratic Party, but "he himself drafted the nomination."

Attacks "Draft" Theory

Hardee, in a statement made public by the Republican National Committee, declared, "This movement started long before there was any war in Europe, or any other so-called 'emergency.' He said one word from the President would have stopped it. Instead, he charged, the President "assiduously saw to it that no other man in the party was built up for the nomination."

Dr. Gerald A. Foster-Brannon, of Richmond, Va., author and lecturer, announced also in Washington, that he was "turning from the Democratic Party." A descendant of Edgar Allen Poe, Dr. Foster-Brannon said:

"I previously have supported the Roosevelt Administration, but . . . in foreign affairs, I believe the President has made too many careless utterances and has over-expressed himself to the detriment of our foreign policy; secondly, I believe power has been passing too rapidly from the people to the hands of the Chief Executive, and, thirdly, I am unalterably opposed to a third term."

Willkie also received messages of support from Frederic R. Coudert, of New York City, and Mrs. Gilford Dudley, of Nashville, Tenn.

He said Coudert had played a leading part for years" in New York Democratic Party affairs and that Mrs. Dudley was the first woman delegate at large to a Democratic convention, in 1920.

Sees Victory in Kansas

Republican Gov. Payne Ratner led a delegation of Kansans here and told Willkie he would carry that farm State by 100,000 votes. President Roosevelt carried the State by about 65,000 votes in 1936 when Alf M. Landon, Kansas, was the G. O. P. nominee.

Ratner added that Landon was anxious to do anything he could to help Willkie's campaign.

Willkie broke in to say that he would ask Landon to make some speeches in his behalf. He said Landon has been "100 per cent" in offering his cooperation.

Willkie also talked during the day with Mrs. Ann Wheaton and Marion Martin, Republican committee woman workers; Mrs. Grace Reynolds, National committee woman from Indiana, and Mrs. Joyce Arnell, of Denver, president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Republican nominee, beginning work on campaign problems, told an earlier press conference his speaking itinerary would include a stumping tour through the South.

The nominee said he had discussed his acceptance address with Raymond L. Buell, former editor of Fortune magazine but made it plain he has done all the actual writing himself.

Senate Urged To Speed Trade Loans

Officials Want $500,000,000 for Export-Import Bank

By the Associated Press

Officials of the State, Treasury, Commerce and Agriculture Departments urged the Senate Banking Committee yesterday to give speedy approval to legislation adding $500,000,000 to the lending power of the Export-Import Bank.

President Roosevelt proposed the increase to assist Latin American nations, through loans, to carry on trade under wartime conditions.

The Senate committee delayed final action on the legislation after a three-hour closed conference. Chairman Wagner (Democrat), New York, said the committee probably would send the measure to the Senate today.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, told the committee that the Export-Import fund "would constitute a most effective and important part of the program of inter-American economic cooperation and hemispheric solidarity."

Linked to Defense

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said the program would fit into the general scheme of cooperation "along economic, political and military lines among the nations of the western hemisphere."

Robert H. Hinckley, Acting Secretary of Commerce, said the proposal "reflects recognition that our economic relations with the other countries of this hemisphere and economic conditions in such countries are vital factors in our ability to defend ourselves against attack."

Jesse H. Jones, Federal loan administrator, testified that the "main purpose of the bill was to assist the countries of the Western Hemisphere in developing and increasing their trade with each other."

Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, leading criticism of the proposal within the Banking Committee, protested that the United States cannot hope to prevent price fluctuations in this continent's commodities, formerly sold to Europe by a system of loans.

Fears Futile Spending

"We have spent a billion and a half dollars in holding our surpluses off the market," Taft said. "If we are going in to hold South American surpluses off the market, there is practically no limit, it seems to me, to what we can spend, all with American taxpayers to do it."

The Political Arena

District of Columbia Republicans have passed the halfway mark toward their quota of $100,000 for the National Committee's campaign fund, E. F. Colladay, national committeeman for the District, yesterday advised National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr.

COLLADAY

"The ready raising of this sum represents only two weeks of work by the District Finance Committee of 75 members," Colladay said. "We are hoping to raise the remainder promptly, so that the District can be cited as a leader in view of the discussion over representation in Congress for Washington."

The finance committee discussed its progress at a luncheon at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

Madison, Wis., July 31 (AP).—Willis E. Donley, a Garner delegate to the Democratic Convention, announced his candidacy for the Republican Congressional nomination and said he would issue a statement through the Republican committee explaining his reasons for leaving the Democratic Party.

Montpelier, Vt., July 31 (AP).—Gov. George D. Aiken proposed to Ralph E. Flanders, his opponent for the Republican Senatorial nomination, that they agree not to "despoil the State's natural beauty" by tacking campaign pictures of themselves about the countryside.

Nashville, Tenn., July 31 (AP).—United States Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, Gov. Prentice Cooper, and three of the State's nine Congressmen will face opposition tomorrow in Tennessee's Democratic primary.

Opponents of McKellar and Cooper have called on the voters to end what they have charged is domination of the State by National Committeeman E. H. Crump, of Memphis.

Running against McKellar are John R. Neal, of Knoxville and Claude C. Toler, of Paris, neither of whom has shown much vote-getting ability in past elections. Gov. Cooper's opponents are George R. Dempster, Knoxville business man, and J. Bailey Wray, also of Knoxville.

Congressmen having opposition are Estes Kefauver, of the Third District, Joseph W. Byrns, son of the late Speaker of the House, Fifth, and Wirt Courtney of the Sixth.

Defense Workers To Get ADA Homes

1,600 Low-Rent Dwellings Planned As a 'Starter'

By Edward Ryan

Washington housing officials reported yesterday that they are ready to build 1,600 lowrent dwellings for defense workers in the District as soon as they get the money.

They indicated, however, that organizations other than the present housing agencies—Congress, the National Defense Advisory Commission, or the newspapers—would have to take a lead in handling such housing projects as these:

1. To survey Washington's present housing facilities, and measure them against an expected influx of defense workers whose total is still a topic for guesswork.

2. To guard Washington tenants against possible skyrocketing rents.

3. To plan cooperation with nearby Maryland and Virginia communities in handling any Washington housing shortage as a "metropolitan" problem, instead of one to be worked out entirely inside the District line.

Program a "Starter"

The program for 1,600 dwellings here was described by John Ihlder, head of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, and representatives of Nathan Straus, United States Housing Administrator, in an hour-long press conference.

This estimate of needed defense housing, said Ihlder, was "conservative" and a "starter." He added it would be boosted later according to the personnel needs of defense agencies. In selecting occupants for the proposed dwellings, he said, the term "defense workers" would include clerical and other employes in defense agencies, as well as the skilled workmen in the navy yard.

Ihlder said that Navy officials had estimated their employes in the navy yard would take care of about half the 1,600 housing units. Four sites, he said, could be used for the building program.

Could Speed Work

One site includes half the area bought by the ADA for the Fort Dupont Dwellings at Anacostia and Ridge Roads southeast. The other three, he said, are each owned by one or two persons, who are willing to sell.

Detailed plans for the housing units, originally prepared for other ADA projects, could be used on at least one, and possibly all four sites to save time, he said. Actual construction, he added, could be speeded by using two or three working shifts.

The homes, he said, would be open to defense workers with families, and incomes of $2,000 or less. Workers in the lowest earning brackets would pay rents equal to one-fifth of their income. Those nearer the $2,000 level would pay one-fourth their income for rent. Employes with "salaries instead of wages" would have to be taken care of by the private housing industry, Ihlder said.

Ihlder and the USHA officials pointed out the proposed program is intended to supplement whatever private enterprise does in housing, and also to strengthen the ADA's normal slum-clearance and low-rent dwelling work. The defense housing program, they said, would be an expansion of the normal program, "permitting rapid provision of needed homes without awaiting removal of an equal number of slum homes. When the emergency is over, the defense homes could be incorporated in the regular slum-clearance program, they said.

Two potential sources of the money needed were cited, both of them in bills awaiting action by Congress. A House bill, reported by the Naval Affairs Committee, would give $250,000,000 in repayable loan funds to be used in national defense housing. A Senate bill, awaiting action by the House Rules Committee, would provide $5,000,000 which USHA officials indicated was necessary to thaw out a "frozen" $150,000,000 fund being held for the original slum-clearance program.

This fiscal difficulty, officials explained, arose because the USHA housing program called for the agency to supply both loans, for low-cost dwelling construction, and annual cash grants, for the running Federal subsidy that permits holding rents down in the projects.

Neither ADA or USHA, officials said, has authority, to conduct an overall survey of Washington housing facilities, or to regulate rents. World War rent regulation, it was pointed out, came through Congressional action. One official suggested that the "newspapers" might do something about local housing. A reporter countered with the suggestion that it was a job for the Government.

Aides of Charles H. Palmer, newly appointed Housing Coordinator for the National Defense Commission, pointed out that their work had started only 10 days ago, and suggested it was too early to discuss their possible part in Washington's housing problem.

ADA and USHA officials said they had not estimated what the 1,600 Washington dwellings would cost, or how many of the 150 to 200 requests for defense housing in other cities could be met with the proposed $250,000,000 loan fund.

Post's Story That Parents Had No Funds Brings Many Offers of Assistance; Aid Promised Other Children in Family

Responding to the need of the Stephen O'Donald family, sympathetic Washingtonians have made all arrangements for the funeral of little "Wiona, aged 3, who was fatally injured Monday when struck by an automobile near her home, 1606 Thirty-third street northwest.

The Post's story yesterday to the effect that her parents had no funds to provide for her burial brought many offers of assistance. The George W. Wise Funeral Home was the first of three undertaking establishments to offer its services. Rites will be held there tomorrow at 10 a. m., the Rev. M. M. Perkins, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, officiating.

Cedar Hill Cemtery offered a burial plot, but the family had already accepted the offer of Elmer Beach, Winona's godfather, to place her beside his parents in Oakwood Cemetery, Falls Church, Va. Beach, who is a watchman for a local department store, took a half day off from his work yesterday to go to Falls Church and make the arrangements.

The Mothers Club, of Georgetown Playground, which was the first group of friends to extend help, has provided the child's clothes, including a pink taffeta dress, shoes and a white ribbon for her hair. A white lambskin casket was given by the Miller Casket Co.

The Lion's Club of Georgetown, as a result of The Post's story, called a special meeting of the board of directors yesterday morning and voted to defray all expenses of the child's funeral. But so many others had already volunteered that the only need left for the club to meet was the opening of the grave.

Several calls also came to The Post from individuals who desired to contribute to a fund to bury the child. In each case, the callers pointed out that Washingtonians should take care of the children in their midst as well as sending aid to those abroad. On learning the funeral had been arranged for, one woman promised clothing and aid to the remaining children of the family.

While plans for the burial were being made, Mrs. O'Donald sat quietly at home with the other children. "I have all I can do to keep track of them," she said.

Baby Catherine, who had been cared for Tuesday by her aunt in Maryland, was home yesterday, lying on the living room floor, her auburn hair on a sofa pillow, her bottle in her hands. She had never been away from her mother before and had cried so her aunt had to bring her home.

"None of the younger children has a bed," the mother explained, "and the four little ones—three now—sleep on the living room floor."

Girl Leans Out of Bus, Struck by Post, Dies

Waynesville, N. C., July 31 (AP)—Maxine Michalove, 6, was fatally injured here today when she leaned out of a bus window to wave at two small friends, and struck her head against a telephone post. She died a short while afterward.

The child, daughter of W. W. Michalove, formerly of Asheville, but now of Harrisonburg, Va., was attending a summer camp here.

Text of Stimson's Statement on Draft

Secretary of War Urges Conscription Before House Unit

The prepared statement read by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, to the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday follows:

You, gentlemen, are the trustees of the security of the United States. One of the main purposes of our Constitution is to provide for the common defense. Under that Constitution the power to raise and support armies was specifically given to the Congress. You, gentlemen, are the members of the committee which was created to guide the House of Representatives in the performance of its duties in that matter of raising and supporting armies. Thus in that matter you are in very special sense, the trustees for the people of the United States.

Now what are the rules which in ordinary life guide a trustee in the performance of his duties?

First and foremost it is his duty to follow the lessons of experience. It is his duty to avoid methods which have been shown to be ineffective and futile; which have not only been futile but have been breeders of evils and dangers. It is his duty, in other words, to play safe with the great trust which has been confided to him.

No Doubt as to Method

When we apply these simple and well-known fiduciary rules to the problem of this bill which is before you now, it seems to me that there can be no doubt or question as to the method to follow. If there is any lesson that has been thoroughly proved by history throughout the life of our Nation, it is that the only safe and effective way to meet a great war emergency is by the timely creation of a selective compulsory system for raising our armies. The other system, the system of volunteering, has been tried again and again, and in every serious war, as well as in some wars which were not serious, it has proved a costly failure. Our Government tried it in the Revolution. Within two years the great States of Virginia and Masachusetts were forced to resort to the draft and even then the total number of men serving under arms in the American armies declined from some 79,000 men in 1776 to less than 30,000 men in 1781. In the Civil War both sides began with volunteers and both sides eventually were compelled to resort to the draft. We tried it in the Spanish War and although the number of men required was extremely small in comparison to our population, even that small number was never fully enlisted.

Cites World War Success

Finally, in the great war, our Government began with a carefully devised selective and compulsory system, and the largest armies ever used in our history were raised with an enthusiasm which was magnificent, and with a minimum of disturbance to our national and industrial life.

The experience of Great Britain has been similar to ours. She had the same prejudice as we did against conscription and in favor of the voluntary system. In both the great war and on the approach of the present war, she delayed in instituting a compulsory system, with the result, in both cases, that there was caused enormous loss and confusion, and now possibly eventual disaster. In all the other nations of Europe, from peace-loving Switzerland to the totalitarian states, the compulsory system is recognized as the only effective method by which a nation can organize its military strength.

Thus, from the standpoint of the lessons of human experience, there can be no question between the two methods; there can be no question that one has regularly proved a costly failure, while the other is now universally recognized as the only system which is effective.

Only Efficient Sysem

In the next place, from the standpoint of principle, the selective compulsory system is the only one which is fair; the only system which distributes the primary duty of national defense upon every citizen and which distributes that duty so that each man may serve in the capacity where he will be most effective. It is also the only system which is appropriate to a democracy; which recognizes that, in a country where all citizens have the right to participate in choosing their own government, they are also obligated to serve and defend that government in case of the peril of war. It would be just as unfair to leave to the whim of the individual the question of whether or not he will render service to his government in time of war as it would be to leave to the whim of the individual the question of whether or not he would pay taxes for the support of that government.

Thirdly, the selective compulsory system is the only efficient system in the great task of avoiding, so far as possible, the disruption of the Nation's normal life. The voluntary system is not only inadequate to raise modern armies but it is disruptive of industry and of agriculture and of all the sciences and specialties upon which a nation must depend in time of war. All those activities, under a voluntary system, are liable to be disrupted by the rush of patriotic citizens to enlist and fight when they might be more useful elsewhere.

Minimum of Dislocation

On the other hand, the compulsory system, when carefully administered, as it was during the great war, by local boards which take into account not only the battle needs of the country but also its needs of supplies and armaments, will carry the country through the strain of war with the minimum of dislocation. It will not only do that but it will carry it through with the minimum of injustice to the individual, because those boards take into account the situation of each man in respect to his occupation, his family duties and his health.

In all these ways the selective compulsory system is the closest approximation to both efficiency and justice which the experience of this country has yet evolved.

But some of the opponents of compulsory service say that it is a war measure and therefore that we should not adopt it until war has actually arrived. That is exactly what people in Great Britain said to Winston Churchill for four years, when he was steadily preaching that war was coming and that Britain should immediately prepare herself for it. When we look at Great Britain today, are we inclined to take the risk of a similar delay? The successive experiences of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France and Britain, teach the lesson of the danger of not preparing before war actually arrives.

Far Greater Peril Now

We don't have to look abroad for an answer to this question. We only have to contrast the position in which we ourselves stand today with the position in which we stood in 1917 when we adopted the selective act of 1917. I ask you in all fairness, are we not today confronting a far greater peril than we did in June 1917? In 1917 we were protected by the unbroken line of the Allies in France and by the unshaken control of the sea by those Allies. Today there is no line in France and the control of the sea by the British fleet is in jeopardy. Today we are face to face with a potential enemy which not only has been conscripting and training its own forces for the past six years but which today is putting conscription into effect upon its victims in Poland and France, and in Norway, Denmark and Holland, in order that its own war supplies may be more ample.

We have been accustomed to think of our Navy and the seas which surround our country as constituting a line of defense so strong that a powerful Army was unnecessary. But today the great shipbuilding industries of Norway and Holland have passed into German hands. The fleet of Italy and her shipbuilding capacity are subject to German disposition. A prudent trustee must take into consideration the possibility that in another thirty days Great Britain herself may be conquered and her shipyards pass under German control. Many of the war vessels of France have already come under the control of Germany and the same thing may occur in regard to the great fleet of Great Britain.

Arms No Good Without Men

In the Pacific Ocean the powerful fleet of Japan is owned by a power acting in close sympathy with Germany and Italy. Under these circumstances it seems to me very clear that we must revise our former conception of the strength of our first line of defense. If all of these contingencies which now confront us should be resolved in Germany's favor, she would at once control a naval power which would outrank us in all classes of fighting craft. What is worse, she would outrank us in shipbuilding capacity in a ratio of at least 6 to 1. In the prospect of such a possibility, I suggest to you in all earnestness that it is your duty as trustees to take at once those measures for the security of the United States which have behind them those reasons of experience, of efficiency, of justice and of fairness which I have just recited.

The Congress has already wisely recognized what a long time it takes to secure a modern armament and has already made large appropriations for that purpose. It would be well to recognize also that it takes a long time to secure and train the men to use such arms, and that the arms are of little use without the men.

Germany and compelling them to furnish war supplies to Germany."

The Senate committee's revision of the Burke-Wadsworth bill was announced after a three-hour closed session, occupied with discussion of numerous "compromise" plans.

As the bill now stands, about 12,000,000 men would be liable to one year of military training. Men with dependents and those employed in occupations essential to the defense program would be granted deferments, leaving a reservoir of some 4,500,000 able-bodied men. From this group 400,000 would be chosen by lot for immediate training within a few weeks of enactment of the bill.

The committee also made provision in the bill yesterday for one-year voluntary enlistments in the Army for men between 18 and 35. Minimum enlistment period now is three years.

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, appeared before the committee to urge as a substitute his bill confining compulsory training to men from 21 to 25 and providing that Congress should limit the size of the Army, Regulars and draftees, to 750,000 men.

The Senate committee will continue consideration of the bill at an executive session today. Open hearings will be resumed before the House committee at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Strategy for a fight against the bill will be mapped at a meeting tomorrow of the Congressional Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars, which now has 50 members in the House. Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, said committee members at an informal session yesterday expressed unanimous opposition to the bill.

Embargo Placed On Aviation Gas

retary Stephen T. Early said, making the announcement for the President. He did not use the word "embargo," however.

Cuts Trade Two-Thirds

Stoppage of aviation gasoline to customers outside this hemisphere will cut by almost two-thirds this country's annual $22,000,000 business in aircraft fuel, Commerce Department figures showed.

Official statistics revealed that France was this country's best customer for the fuel in the first half of 1940, taking 513,513 barrels, of 42 gallons each. Great Britain was next with purchases of 504,196 barrels and Japan third with 105,862.

Japanese purchases this year were considerably below the total of 341,286 barrels Nippon bought in the first half of 1939. This, officials said, could be explained by the slower tempo of the war in China.

Germany and Italy bought 23,935 and 179,929 barrels, respectively, in the first six months of 1939.

Imposition of the embargo leaves only the Latin-American nations, Canada, and Western Hemisphere possessions of European countries as outlets for United States exports of gasoline with an aviation octane rating of 87 to 100.

In this hemisphere the leading customer during the first half of 1940 was the Dutch West Indies, which ships petroleum here for cracking and then imports it after it is refined. They bought 191,238 barrels.

Second as a Western Hemisphere buyer was Canada, taking 28,780 barrels, and Brazil, with 26,844 barrels, was third.

Application forms for export of the fuel to Western Hemisphere nations must state what the gasoline will be used for, a provision designed to prevent circumventing of the law.

Sole exception to the embargo is provision for sending gasoline to branches of American firms abroad, such as Pan American Airways bases.

The move was recommended to President Roosevelt by Lieut. Col. R. L. Maxwell, administrator of export control.

Nazis Bomb Coast, Lose 3 Raiders

Heavy Explosions Shake Britain's Channel Shore

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Aug. 1.—Heavy explosions shook the southeast coast of England today as high-flying German raiders loosed bombs and fled back across the Channel with British fighters in pursuit.

Nazi airmen dropped their cargoes near where three German planes were believed to have been shot down last night. Ground guns and Royal Air Force pilots fought the Germans also over southwest England, Wales and northern Ireland.

In fierce fighting over the southeast coast last night, one German raider was reported to have crashed near the coast and two others farther inland.

The Bremen and Hamburg radio stations faded out early today, indicating new British air raids over Germany.

240 Planes Lost in Month

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 31.—The shooting down of 240 German planes during July by British ground defenses and R. A. F. fliers with estimated enemy losses of at least 600 officers and men killed or made prisoner, was announced by the Air Ministry today.

Coincidentally, these officials declared that R. A. F. bombers had inflicted fresh damage on Nazi air bases and railroad traffic along nearby French, Belgian and Dutch coasts, as well as the Emden Naval Station and factories inland.

The London authorities asserted that in addition to the 240 German planes damaged and known to have been put out of action in July, many other machines were damaged and some of them probably destroyed during air attacks on this country and and still others were hit during R. A. F. bombing raids on German home bases.

Emphasize Losses

The British keep emphasizing that German losses of their air personnel are important because although the enemy, with their methods of mass airplane production, can quickly replace machines they cannot train new crews at the same rate.

The total of R. A. F. losses for the month of July has not been given out yet nor has the total number of civilian casualties resulting from this month's German aerial attacks on Britain.

[German spokesmen in Berlin told the Associated Press that Britain had lost 370 planes since June 25—an average of 74 a week.

[Two British bombers were shot down yesterday the Germans said, during an alleged bombing attack on the open university town of Heidelberg.

[The Germans now claim 21 British planes were shot down in Monday's big air battle over Dover. The high command said a British plane factory at Filton and docks and piers at Swansea and Plymouth were successfully bombed last night.]

Nazi Bases Attacked

Throughout yesterday until a late hour last night British medium bombers maintained a succession of attacks, principally on seven German air bases in France and the Low Countries.

One British plane failed to return, the air ministry said.

Oil storage depots at Homburg and Monheim, an aluminum factory at Cologne, freight yards at Soest, barge concentrations off Waalcheren Island and an oil storage plant at St. Colomb, south of St. Valery, also suffered damage during the day, the air ministry said. The Emden naval base came in for another aerial attack but the results were not detailed.

The Norwegian coast also came in for some attention yesterday. Air officials said a lone Hudson aircraft of the coastal command, while making a reconnaissance flight in that region, shot up parties of enemy soldiers building gun emplacements on a cliffside and bombed and damaged a German supply ship, all within the space of 60 minutes.

7 Army Fliers Bail Out; Are Believed Safe

Panama City, July 31 (AP).—Seven U. S. Army fliers who bailed out of their crashing bomber, apparently escaped injury today, but Sergt. Leo Sviechowiez, a passenger in another plane going to the rescue, was injured when the second ship overturned in landing.

Lieut. William E. Greer, pilot of the bomber, which was towing a gunnery target when the motor failed, was found in the interior near Fort Rio Hato. He said the other six members had parachuted safely in the isolated region.

Merica Insists He's Patriotic And Shows It

PROVES HIS PATRIOTISM—Noah Merica, of 1313 Tenth street northwest, arrested yesterday for desecrating the American Flag, insists that his action was unintentional. To prove that he really is patriotic, Merica shows this wall paper bearing a design of the American Flag which he has been saving to decorate his room

Desecrating Flag Unwittingly, WPA Laborer Is Arrested

Man Who Wrapped Trash With Soiled Banner Said He Intended No Disrespect, But Didn't Know How to Dispose of It

The tale of a crippled District man whose career has been almost synonymous with misfortune, came to light yesterday when he was arrested on a charge of "desecrating the American flag."

Noah Merica, of 1313 Tenth street northwest, was arrested early yesterday when neighbors complained to police that he was using an American flag to wrap trash.

The 33-year-old WPA laborer, who has been stationed at the Naval Air Station, War Department, and who at present is working at the Navy Yard, said he intended no disrespect to the flag. He said that a small boy who lives with him, Powell Thompson, 9, had found the flag in the street and brought it home.

Not knowing how to dispose of the soiled banner, Merica unwittingly cut it up and wrapped it about empty tin cans for collection by the refuse department.

A short time later he was approached by Officer J. C. Vinson, of No. 2 precinct, who asked if he had put the flag in the trash can. Readily admitting his error, Merica was taken to the precinct, charged with desecrating the American Flag, and released on $100 collateral. He was ordered to appear at 9:30 a. m. today before the U. S. branch of the Policie Court for a hearing.

A native of Shenandoah, Va., Merica was crippled at the age of 12 when an accident with a shotgun blew off his right leg and a finger. At 18 he lost the sight of one eye. Still later he lost part of one ear to the teeth of a dog.

Earlier this year he was summoned to appear before U. S. postal authorities when he unknowingly violated a minor postal regulation.

Although a native Virginian, Merica has one thing in common with native Washingtonians. He has never voted.

U. S. Telephone Network Placed On Virtual War-Time Footing

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its subsidiaries have placed the Nation's telephone communications network on a virtual wartime footing in the last six weeks.

Acting at the suggestion of national defense officials, precautions have been taken to protect vital operating centers, and added facilities are being set up to meet growing demands of preparedness activities.

An official of the A. T. & T.—explaining that the 24 operating companies of the Bell System have wide discretion in meeting local problems—said today that these steps have been taken since a "defense" meeting of company executives in June:

Extra guards have been posted at vital operating points. In a Western district, guards were chosen from former Marines who had been approved by the FBI.

Admission of visitors and unauthorized employes to telephone plants has been sharply restricted.

Photographing of plants and equipment has been forbidden.

Emergency power plant installations have been augmented, to insure unbroken operation.

In offices where formerly only women employes worked, work schedules have been altered to insure the presence of men 24 hours a day. These men, in addition to their routine duties, are charged with the responsibility of insuring that no unauthorized person enters the building. Some are armed.

British Chase Nazi Raider Off Brazil

Claim Vessel Struck By Merchant Cruiser In Clash Near Trinidad

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, July 31.—British warcraft ranged angrily off the Brazilian coast tonight in hot pursuit of a German merchant raider reported already damaged by the British merchant cruiser Alcantara in a brief sea action which returned warfare to the Western Hemisphere.

Official information was sparse, but word from naval circles here and in Montevideo and Rio de Janeiro agreed that the engagement occurred at dusk Monday near the Brazilian island of Trinidad—well within the American neutrality zone—and that both ships were hit.

Alcantara Hit

British sources in Rio de Janeiro said the 22,000-ton Alcantara, her speed reduced by what the admiralty in London had described as a "lucky" shot suffered while she was in pursuit of the German, was heading into Rio de Janeiro.

This indicated the Britishers which took up the chase where the Alcantara left off were in considerable strength and possibly included the cruiser squadron which chased the German battleship Graf Spee into Montevideo harbor before she scuttled herself.

[In London, The Admiralty acknowledged Britain's twenty-ninth destroyer loss of the war—the 1,375-ton Delight, sunk by "enemy air attack." Loss of life was small, the Admiralty said, but there was no indication of where the vessel went down, or with whether the "enemy" was Italy or Germany.]

Raider Believed Caught

Some persons expressed belief that the Alcantara had caught the Nazi raider while she was refueling and possibly refitting in the shelter of Trinidad, frequently used as a German secret base in the first World War.

It was indicated that the shell which struck the Alcantara exploded in the engine room.

The problem of the pursuing British warcraft was whether the raider had fled seaward or was seeking shelter along the rough Brazilian coastline.

The fight of Monday evening paralleled the classic struggle of 1914 betwen the German armed merchantman Cap Trafalgar and the British armed cruiser Carmania off Trinidad Island, which is 660 miles east of Rio de Janeiro.

The Carmania caught and destroyed the Cap Trafalgar after a day-long fight.

That historic fight was called "the battle of the haystacks" because the towering superstructures of both vessels were so torn by shell fire as to resemble high tottering piles of burning straw.

Neither here nor in the London Admiralty announcement was it possible to identify the German vessel fought by the Alcantara.

(In New York, some shipping authorities said the circumstances suggested that it was likely the 10,000-ton Narvik, a German raider once suspected of flying the Swedish flag. The Narvig is understood to carry disappearing 6-inch guns under canvas.)

The Admiralty announcement declared the German ship fled after she was hit, using a smoke screen to escape.

Japanese Quiz A.P. Reporter On Cox's Death

Question Dispatches Telling Doubts That Newsman Killed Self

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 1.—Relman Morin, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo, returned to his office at 1:30 a. m. today (11:30 a. m. E. S. T. Wednesday) after several hours of questioning by Japanese gendarmes about his dispatches reporting the death of Melville James Cox, correspondent in Japan for Reuters (British news agency).

Morin said he was unable to comment on the proceedings at the gendarmerie headquarters to which he was taken at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday.

While he was with the gendarmes no communication with him was permitted, the United States Embassy was informed.

(The Domei dispatch reaching Shanghai said the gendarmes accused Morin of sending dispatches intimating that Cox's death on July 29 was not a suicide, as the Japanese had stated, and also that the Japanese announcement asserted the farewell note bore Cox's signature, whereas the note as published was unsigned.

Foreign Office spokesman Yakichiro Suma said meanwhile Japan would reject British protests over her arrest of more than a dozen British citizens accused of spying and indicated the arrests would continue.

"It would be untirely unreasonable for Britain to make any sort of protest in connection with the arrests," he said. "All persons attempting to spy into military secrets will be dealt with relentlessly."

Say They Have Evidence

Suma did not disclose the number arrested, but said the authorities had "sufficient evidence" against those held.

(British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax said yesterday strong protests already had been delivered to the Japanese both in Tokyo and London. Four prominent British businessmen who had been picked up now were released, it was reported.

Nazis to Blast English Ports One by One

Raid on Dover, Heralds Drive To Isolate Britain

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), Aug. 1.—The concentrated dive-bombing attack on Dover last Monday was pictured by German sources today as starting the next phase of pre-invasion action against England—systematic destruction of her vital ports one at a time.

These sources said Britain's trade and supply lanes, and her port facilities are the weak link in her tight-drawn defense chain.

Observation planes which since have studied the results of the Stukas' work at Dover reported to Berlin that at least three ships were sunk in the harbor, harbor facilities were wrecked and the port definitely was out of commission.

Real Blasting Begun

Military observers declared that what Marshal Goering termed "exploratory flights" have been completed, and the real Stuka blasting of ports has begun.

The impression was given that for the time being—at least during this port-smashing phase—there would be no actual attempt at invasion.

Already, drawing upon her powerful air reserves in an effort to tighten a blockade on England, Germany has claimed a heavy toll in sunken shipping.

Figures released last night listed 1,270,000 tons of British shipping sunk since June 25—a weekly average of 250,000 tons.

Immediate Invasion Unlikely, Says Gayda

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, July 31.—German and Italian troops were reported concentrating tonight along 300 miles of the Continental coast, but still the most authoritative word heard was that the time had not yet come for the great spring across the Channel against England.

Physically, there was every sign that the hour of invasion was approaching. Throughout western Europe there were mutually corroborative whispers that Axis men and Axis boats and planes were assembling for the supreme test.

Nevertheless, one of the most powerful of all Italian journalists, Virginio Gayda, told the world not to look for any quick thrust at Britain.

Writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, a publication that often speaks for the Italian government, Gayda acknowledged that "the spectacular lightning campaign" so familiar in German strategy against Poland, Holland, Belgium and the like wouldn't work against England.

The campaign against the British Isles, he said, is to be one of attrition—and is already under way.

"It (this campaign) must be one of constant hammering and exhaustion," explained the Italian editor. "It must strike and destroy with calculated method all the national and imperial forces of diverse nature and topography which may sustain British resistance."

This exposition won acceptance in certain quarters here as the real view of the Axis powers, and some thought it raised the odds on Britain's chances to defend herself successfully—even on her chances for eventual victory.

Britain Far From Exhausted

Foreign observers generally agreed that Britain—despite the continuous "pulverizing" air attack on industries and shipping of which Gayda spoke—was far from being exhausted.

They wondered how Germany and Italy could afford to give Britain even a month—much less a whole winter—in which to catch her breath, increase her munitions production, speed up shipments of warplanes from the United States.

But while some accepted the Gayda editorial as a plain statement of German and Italian intentions, others suggested that it might have been intended only to mislead the British and to give to an imminent invasion as much of the element of surprise as possible.

[A New York Times dispatch dated "somewhere in France," said the German army has now in place or is rapidly placing multiple lines of artillery along the Channel coast to lay a barrage covering 75 miles of the Channel from Boulogne to near Dunkerque. There are guns of all calibers and ranges, assuring gunfire control of the entire width of the Channel within this zone.]

Along this line, there were various strong indications that the invasion was close at hand:

1. From Vichy, France, it was reported that postal, telephone and telegraph communication in the German-occupied areas of France had been suspended. This would be a normal prelude to operations against England. Tonight, all postal, telephone and telegraphic communications with the occupied region from the unoccupied region was forbidden, effective at midnight.

"She further hopes that Congress will pass legislation which will bring suffrage to voteless citizens of Washington. She trusts such action can be accomplished in the near future. She is enthusiastic in her support of the principle involved."

Senator King, who is both chairman of the Senate District Committee and ranking majority member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, expressed his approval of the Sumners resolution upon his return to Washington from Utah.

"There is a great deal of merit in the Sumners resolution," he said. "It is the best approach to the subject offered so far."

Senator King recalled that several years ago he had introduced a bill to give the District a delegate in the House and added that he now has no objection to allowing a delegate in the Senate, as well. Such action would put the Capital in the same political status of a United States territory.

Ashurst Explains Attitude

Chairman Ashurst, who previously had promised hearings on the Capper national representation resolution whenever its author requested them, explained his own attitude thus:

"I believe profoundly that the District of Columbia should have the opportunity to elect their own representatives to speak their interests and to vote for their interests in both houses of Congress."

Senator Ashurst added that he had been "a convert to this creed" for 23 years.

"I believe in representative government, and representative government for the District is that they should have fellow citizens of their own selection, who know their needs, to speak for them in the national assemblage. If I had my way the District would have two such representatives in the Senate and two in the House."

The Arizona Senator said that he is not familiar with the Sumners resolution and that whatever suffrage legislation is passed must carry adequate safeguards of all Federal interests.

Amendments Planned

Despite the optimism of Chairman Sumners, there were indications last night that the House Judiciary Committee may not reach a vote on the Sumners resolution today.

Several members plan to offer amendments, it is understood, and a general discussion of the legislation is expected to occupy most of the time.

One suggested amendment would restrict the District to representation in the House, thus depriving the Capital of a Senator. Another suggestion has been made that all reference to local self-government be stricken from the resolution.

Chairman Sumners, on the other hand, holds that his resolution is all right as written and points out that the extent of District representation is Congress can be determined by Congress if and when the States ratify the proposed Constitutional amendment.

President's Choice For Comptroller

vention. Warren, one of Mr. Roosevelt's closest House consultants, is nominally chairman only of the House Accounts Committee and of the special House committee on campaign expenditures. He functions mainly as a subleader and was expected to stand for election to the next vacancy in the majority leadership.

From Red to Black

As House accounts chairman, one of his first triumphs was bringing the House Restaurant out of the red.

In May, 1937, Warren was elected Speaker Pro tem of the House for two weeks, third person to serve in that capacity up to that time in 30 years. An able parliamentarian, he has presided over virtually all of the great measures passed in the House in the last ten years.

It was Warren, in cooperation with Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, who worked out the successful reorganization bill compromise after the President had been defeated on the original bill.

Warren was renominated for his ninth two-year term in the House last May, and since his first race has never had Democratic opposition.

While he usually fought on the Administration side, during the present session he led a fight against the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill and succeeded in getting the conference report recommitted by 28 majority.

Warren is married and has three children. The oldest child, Lindsay C. Warren, jr., recently has been desperately ill. Friends believe that his concern over his son's precarious health influenced him in accepting the post.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt signed a bill, which passed both houses Monday, granting the TVA $25,000,000 to begin expansion of power facilities for national defense industries—particularly aluminum—in the Tennessee Valley area.

The new funds "will help augment the very substantial blocks of power already available or in prospect, not only at TVA but in other parts of the country," said the President. "This tremendous amount of low-cost energy in strategically located for the manufacture of material essential to the national defense."

The President noted that the availability of cheap Bonneville power was a vital factor in the stimulation of such national defense industries in the Northwest as manufacture of aluminum parts and high grade iron and steel alloys.

The developments in the Southeast and Northwest demonstrate the unity of the national defense program, he declared.

In the hearings on the bill, which were released yesterday, it was revealed that Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, told the appropriations committee that "at the present time we are having great difficulty in placing contracts with the manufacturers" because of the reduction in profit limitation from 12 to 8 per cent.

Time Is Short, Marshall Warns

Pointing out that the law places the same restriction on subcontractors, Admiral Towers declared that the latter are "not anxious to get the business and they can fill up their plants, so they say, with business from other sources, including munition manufacturers, which are not subject to the same profit limitations."

"That," said the Admiral, "coupled with the uncertainty about amortization of expanded plants and equipment, makes it very difficult to place those contracts." Naming specific cases, Admiral Towers emphasized that it is the subcontractors and not the major aircraft or engine manufacturers who balk at the reduced profits.

The uncertain state of the excess profits tax, which is being worked out by Treasury and Congressional experts at the present time, was said by Secretary Knox to have a bad effect on manufacturers.

Brig. Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the material division of the Army Air Corps, asserted that the modification of the profits law in June required contracts already drawn up to be thrown "into the wastebasket," and further delays are now necessitated by the uncertainty of the tax situation.

"The industry will not sign contracts," Gen. Brett complained, adding that he was "ready to buy approximately 4,000 airplanes."

During the hearings, Secretary Knox said the defense bill would permit a program of "hemisphere defense," not merely "national defense." But Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, observed that "we are faced with a tragic shortage of time in building our defenses."

Airline Plans New D. C. Routes

Transcontinental and Western Airlines will shortly seek permission from the Civil Aeronautics Authority to operate new routes from Washington to Dayton, Ohio, and from Washington to St. Louis, via intermediate cities now without air service.

The Dayton trip would include a stop at Clarksburg, W. Va. The St. Louis route would include stops at Evansville, Ind., Louisville, Ky., Frankfort and Lexington, Ky., according to Jack Frye, airline president.

Convoy Unlikely For Windsors' Ship

Welles Says British Escort for U. S. Boat Is Against Neutrality

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles warned yesterday that any convoying by British warships of the American ship bringing the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to America would violate American neutrality.

Replying to questions at his press conference, Welles said he had no official information that such a convoy was planned for the steamship Excalibur, sailing today from Lisbon, with the Duke and Duchess aboard, but said it would be an inconceivable action.

He assumed that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who will be traveling to their post in the Bahamas, were coming as passengers, just the same as other passengers. He would not express an opinion on whether a convoy would not be a convoy if British naval vessels followed at a distance. That was a technical question that he could not answer, he said.

American ships cross from Lisbon without convoy, with the American flag prominently displayed, and lights burning at night.

Windsors Take Ten Cabins

Lisbon, July 31 (U.P.).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor today inspected the ten cabins which they and members of their suite will occupy aboard the American Export Line steamer Excalibur when the vessel sails at 4 p. m. (11 a. m. E. D. T.) tomorrow for New York.

The Windsors will remain only briefly in New York before proceeding to Nassau where the Duke will take up his new duties as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bahamas under appointment of his brother, King George VI.

Large amounts of the couple's luggage were sent aboard during the day. The Duke and Duchess will board the Excalibur two hours before it sails.

Among the last acts of the Duke and Duchess before sailing was to send thanks for social courtesies extended to them in Portugal after their flight from France, including a tea given in honor of the Duchess by Madame Carmona, wife of the President of Portugal.

Get Last Marriage License Under Old Virginia Law

JUST UNDER THE LINE—Rhea Nalls (left), clerk, hands to Paul N. Cooksey, 23, of Washington, and Delores Deihr, 23, of Alexandria, the last marriage license issued at Alexandria (Va.) yesterday. The couple received the certificate just before the marriage bureau closed and beat by a few hours the State's new premarital blood test law effective today. The law ends Virginia's status as a Gretna Green for hasty marriages and will delay issuance of licenses from five to seven days in most sections of the State.

Planes Bomb Rock, Spanish Report Says

By the Associated Press

Algeciras, Spain, July 31.—The great fortress of Gibraltar was heavily bombed late this afternoon.

Taking advantage of scattered clouds, an undetermined number of planes, believed to have been Italian, swooped down over the rock and dropped several bombs.

The explosions could be heard a long distance away in Spain.

Antiaircraft guns went into action immediately, but the raiders apparently escaped without damage.

The damage to the fortress was not immediately ascertained.

[The Madrid radio said British naval forces sailed from Gibraltar this morning and hours later still was maneuvering in the Straits. Five submarines led the way, followed by four destroyers, an aircraft carrier and three capital ships, the radio account said.]

Red Sea Port Bombed

Rome, July 31 (A.P.).—Italian planes again bombed the Red Sea port of Aden yesterday, scoring direct hits on two ships and a big oil tank, the high command reported today.

(Aden is a fortified British colony strategically located at the southern entrance to the Red Sea.)

All planes which participated in the raid returned safely, a communique said.

An attempted raid on the Italian base of Assab in Eritrea was reported to have cost the British one bombing plane, shot down by anti-aircraft batteries.

British Inflict Losses

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, July 31. (A.P.).—Continued advances into British territory by the Italian forces which have driven southward into Kenya from Ethiopia was indicated today by the British communique.

It said:

"Strong enemy forces were encountered at Dobel, approximately 30 miles south of Moyale.

"After a sharp engagement, and having inflicted considerable losses on the enemy, our troops broke off the action."

B.E.F. May Beat Nazis to Punch, Official Says

British Invasion of Lands Held by Reich Seen Possible by Secretary

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 31.—The British heard today with mixed emotions that Virginio Gayda, who is supposed to speak with oracular wisdom about the intentions of the Axis partners, had informed his public that the much ballyhooed invasion of this country has been postponed.

In some quarters there was disappointment that the showdown should be deferred again while others welcomed an opportunity to perfect the defenses. Some cynics held that a closer watch than ever should be kept now upon these shores.

Leopold Amery, secretary for India, in a speech at Dudley declared that unless Chancellor Hitler hurried to attempt something which even Napoleon had failed to carry off, he might find his own territory invaded by the British Expeditionary Force.

His words were the first definite suggestion by a responsible official that this government was planning to carry the war to enemy soil, although the government recognizes that it cannot triumph in this struggle merely by defending this island citadel, blockading Europe and bombing enemy factories, airports and gasoline dumps from the air.

However, Amery made it clear he realized that before an opportunity comes for the Expeditionary Force to attack the enemy on his home grounds, the blockade must do its work and the air force be brought up to a place of numerical superiority.

As the first step toward making the blockade of the whole continent more effective an order in council was issued today, effective at midnight, making all vessels proceeding to and from a port through which goods might "reach or come from enemy territory" subject to prize court action unless all goods carried were covered by navicert.

The new system is designed to choke off German overseas trade by stopping her imports at their source and preventing exports from enemy countries, or countries under their domination, from reaching their destination and thereby providing foreign exchange.

As foreshadowed by Shipping Minister Ronald Cross in the House of Commons, the ministry is going to assist the navy in enforcing the new regulations by denying the use of British port facilities to any non-British shipping company which refuses to enter an agreement always to use navicerts. Likewise it will be impossible for them to obtain insurance from Lloyds of London—an important consideration when it is recalled that most of the world's merchant shipping war risks are written in London.

"Greatest Merchant Marine"

London, July 31 (A.P.).—Minister of Shipping Ronald H. Cross in an empire broadcast today confirmed that some of the busiest prewar harbors now are virtually closed, while normal traffic in others is displaced by war commerce.

England expects to surmount all such handicaps, however, Cross said, relying on "the greatest merchant fleet the world has ever seen."

The volume of shipping handled by the big London docks has not been curtailed by German bombardment or threat of bombardment but rather by the natural inroads of the war on the world's shipping, other British officials said.

In his broadcast, Cross pointed to 100 ships in construction in Canadian yards, bolstering Britain's own building, and to the 160,000-man merchant navy Britain has in service, assisted by "hundreds of seamen from great sea-faring nations such as Norway and Holland."

Daily Worker Sold, Ceases To Be Communist Paper

3 Women Acquire Control of Journal, Propose to Continue Publication 'In Interests of Working People'

By the Associated Press

New York, July 31.—The Daily Worker tomorrow will cease to be the official organ of the American Communist Party when its ownership passes—with the blessings and best wishes of the party—to three women, two of them of distinguished colonial ancestry.

The new owners, Mrs. Ferdinanda W. Reed, Mrs. Caro Lloyd Strobell, and Mrs. Susan H. Woodruff, announced today that they had acquired the newspaper from the Comprodaily Publishing Co., Inc., and would begin publishing it tomorrow "as a medium of free expression in the interests of the working people of America."

At the same time, the national committee of the Communist Party, in a statement signed by William Z. Foster, party chairman, and Earl R. Browder, general secretary, announced that it "heartily approved of the transaction" and pledged the new owners "whole hearted" party support.

As a result of the sale, the national committee said it did "not regard the Dailly Worker as, and it in fact ceases to be, the official central organ of the Communist Party."

The new owners announced that although they were the "sole stockholders" of the new corporation—"The Freedom of The Press Co., Inc."—and the "only persons responsible" for organizing the new company, the management and editorship would be in the hands of an executive board.

This board will be composed of Louis F. Budenz, former editor of the Midwest People's Record, of Chicago, and convention president for the Communist Party in 1938; Benjamin J. Davis, jr., colored staff member of the old Daily Worker, and Howard G. Boldt, described only as a newspaperman "of proven ability."

No mention was made of Clarence Hathaway, the present editor, who was sentenced last June 14 to 30 days in jail and fined $500 on conviction of criminal libel in connection with a story the newspaper published. Offices of the publication said they had no information to give concerning Hathaway.

Biographical sketches of the three women accompanying the announcement said they had been long interested in progressive legislation, but their political affiliations were not listed. At the National Communist headquarters, spokesmen said they did not believe the women were Communist Party members.

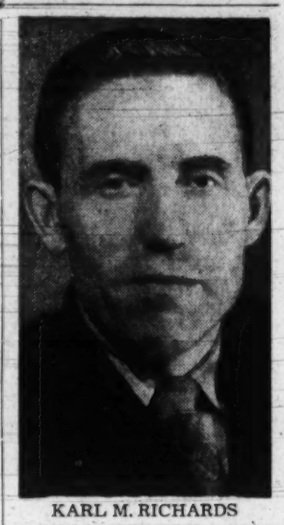
American Runs War Gantlet Of Fire to Reach Good Old U. S.

Tells of Terrifying Air Raids on Calais, Death-Choked Roads



KARL M. RICHARDS

A lanky Westerner returned to Washington from France yesterday sure of one thing: Gen. Sherman was wooing understatement when he made that famous remark about war.

He was Karl M. Richards, for the last four years a Treasury representative in Paris, resident of Salt Lake City and, for the present, in the Capital to make his reports and await a new assignment.

In an interview yesterday, Richards, who reached New York Saturday on a clipper plane, told of refugee-choked roads in northern France, wealthy men offering to pay any price for an automobile which they might drive to safe areas and, finally, of his experiences behind the German lines.

In Calais' Bath of Fire

With his wife and three children, Richards was in Paris on the eve of the Germans' invasion of Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands. Next day he went to Calais on official business, leaving the family behind. He arrived just in time to go through the Channel port's first bombing of the war.

After a one-day stay he returned to Paris. On May 19, he came back to Calais and found conditions so chaotic, what with the almost incessant bombings, that he and his Treasury colleagues decided it was time to interrupt their economic investigations.

"It took me nearly 12 hours to drive from Paris to Calais, a three-hour trip under normal circumstances," Richards said. "Roads were clogged with refugees from the north. Four lanes of traffic poured over two-lane highways. It was confusion at its worst."

Hotel in Perilous Spot

In Calais, he was asked by the consulate to drive to Lille, if it were possible, to pick up a couple of stranded Americans. He made it—how, he still doesn't know—and all three came back to Calais.

Upon their return, Richards found that he could not get the American refugees into his hotel because of a ban on new guests. This was owing to the danger of the accommodations; the hotel adjoining the railway station which was a military objective. He succeeded in having them put up at a waterfront inn.

The garage which Richards patronized refused to take his car, so he parked it in front of the American consulate. That night there was a terrific air raid. Concerned about the welfare of his automobile—his only transport—Richards dashed out of the hotel amid a rain of incendiary bombs.

He found his car would still run though all its glass was smashed. But the hotel which had denied his two friends admittance had been wrecked by a heavy bomb and the garage which had turned him away was ablaze. Twenty-seven cars were lost.

The trio set out in Richard's car on the morning of May 21, hoping to take the direct route to Paris. As it turned out, they had to go by way of Luxembourg, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland, always under Nazi scrutiny until they reached the German-Swiss frontier.

"The conditions we traveled under are unimaginable," the Treasury representative declared. "Roads jammed with every type of carrier conceivable — wheelbarrows, tractors, broken down autos, handsome limousines, bicycles, tanks. When German planes came by and dropped bombs it made things that much worse.

"Much of the time we traveled across fields, rather than on the roads. We would come to stalled cars whose occupants sat gazing straight ahead. Looking closely, we saw they were dead. Once I saw a man leaning over as though fixing a tire. I touched him on the shoulder. His body toppled over."

The Germans, directing Richards and his two companions from town to town, outdid themselves to be polite, he said. At one place he was a colonel's luncheon guest.

'The Ramparts We Watch' Second Week at Keith's

Unique Film Proves Highly Controversial; A Stranger Visits the Roadside Hayloft

WITH "THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH" entering its second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, it seems pertinent to record something of the controversial points of view that have expressed themselves since this first feature-length production by the makers of "The March of Time" had its world premiere on Fifteenth street a week ago last Tuesday night.

BELL

There are, very emphatically, the "fors" and the "againsts." This column places itself in the first classification—not so much because it deems "The Ramparts" a "great picture," in the usual sense, but because it fulfills so admirably the purposes for which it obviously was made. That, as we construe it, is not so much to prod the United States into war or take violent sides in an acute national emergency, but merely to remind America of what it once miraculously did in circumstances not totally foreign to those which now face this country.

The shape of things, in a Wellsian manner of speaking, is not so remote at the moment from the pattern into which they formed themselves in 1914-1918. Why, then, should not the country be reminded of what it had to do—and did—in the earlier crisis. To these eyes and ears, "Ramparts" is an object lesson; not a rabid preachment of inflammatory doctrines one way or the other. As such, it has a definite right to occupy an important place in the consciousness of every citizen of the United States who either remembers what happened a quarter-century ago, or, growing up in the intervening years, needs to find out something tangible and definite about it.

We freely admit that its newsreel "clips" are its most impressive footages and that its personalized sequences, acted by a cast of rank amateurs, its weakest. That, however, does not alter our view that, by and large, the editors of Time and Life have evolved an immensely important document on the side of a factual reminder of what occurred once and may occur again.

That, as I understand it, is all they started out to do.

I have been roundly upbraided in some quarters for having regretted in earlier columns that what has been termed here "personalized drama" is not so impressive in "Ramparts" as slightly ambiguous advance notices gave us reason to expect. More than one has bawled me out bitterly for having said that the picture is not dramatic. I never said that. In fact, I can think of nothing more dramatic than many of its resurrections of heroic events. It is only that these events completely overwhelm the lives of the good people of New London, Conn., the symbol of the United States' entire population. That is why I deem "The Ramparts We Watch" more "documentary" than conventionally "dramatic" in the customary theater sense. The individual characters are caught up in an horrendous cataclysm. That cataclysm is the only thing that matters and the raison d'etre of the film.

Mr. Fred W. Bray, of Lake Zurich, Ill., it seems, is devoting his summer to contemplation of the "summer theater" movement in these United States. Last week, for example, he got around to the Roadside Theater, out on the Rockville pike; the Theater of the Dunes, at Beverly Shores, Ind.; the Michiana Shores, near Michigan City, Ind., and Lake Zurich, Ill. This is what he had to say of the Roadside, as just communicated by Mr. Bray to this column:

"The Roadside Theater is located in a barn near Bethesda, Md., where we found a well-established group, under the direction of Ralph Fowler, playing Ian Hay's 'The Frog' in its first American presentation. Being unfamiliar both with the play and this group's policy of playing only melodrama, we at first had our doubts. During the second act, we awoke to the fact that we were watching melodrama, utterly free from any touch of burlesque and played with restraint so rare as to be an art in itself."

Nice words for Roadsiders' ears.

Thanks to Manager Eddie Plohn, of the National, the Izaak Waltonian Beau Brummel of E streef, for relaying the kind words from Charles Coburn, presiding genius of the Mohawk Drama Festival, on the campus of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y. But with this typewriter sticking the way it is, I wish Mr. Coburn would move his atheneum to Troy!

Before-the-Punch-in-the-Nose Note

Little

Just as Alexander Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo" is one of those rare books which stand the test of many rereadings, so too the film version of that memorable story has become one of those few pictures which may be seen time and again without boredom. The Little Theater is putting this proven virtue to the test once again this week.

Reason for the film's complete success is its unbroken escapism. Never once does one fail to identify himself with sore-set Edmond Dantes. Never once does the film trouble to look for historical parallels, for anything at all to take one's mind from Dantes' unswerving plan for revenge. And when he finds the loot of which the Abbe Faria had told him in the cavern of Chateau D'If, and cries "The World Is Mine!" everyone watching him becomes himself Edmond Dantes. It's interesting, too, to recall that this audience fascination is no new quirk, but that James O'Neill, father of playwright Eugene, played the role for decades on stages all over America.

Robert Donat (pronounced "Donn-at") is noted for his spirited Dantes. The supporting company includes Elissa Landi, Louis Calhern, Sidney Blackmer, Raymond Walburn, O. P. Heggie, William Farnum, Georgia Caine, Luis Alberni, Irene Hervey, Juliette Compton and Lionel Belmore. Rowland V. Lee directed.

She was discovered by Cecil DeMille, who put her under a personal contract, and she was guarded so carefully that she had to submit even a dinner invitation to DeMille or Assistant Bill Pine before she could accept it. Even they didn't know she was married.

About three months ago she moved out of her home and back into the Studio Club. It was after that she started going out with Lew Ayres and Gilbert Roland. Her husband, incidentally, who was young, good looking, built most of the swimming pools for our glamour girls.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 31 (INS).—I cannot blame Alex Korda for being so excited that he is almost inarticulate over the idea of co-starring Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh in a story based on the famous romance of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton, dark-haired beauty who rose from a lowly station in life to be the greatest influence in Lord Nelson's life and the most important woman in England during Nelson's lifetime. I can see Olivier, too, as Lord Nelson, England's greatest sea fighter and most beloved naval hero.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Alex is so imbued with the idea of the colorful Nelson-Hamilton romance that he has signed Walter Reich to write the screen play and R. C. Sheriff, author of "Journey's End," to furnish the dialogue. The script is being treated with all the lavishness that made "Henry the Eighth" such a smashing success. It goes into production September 15, preceding "Cyrano de Bergerac" and all other Korda pictures.

⇝

So much has been said about Paul Muni's refusal to play anything but highbrow roles that it is particularly interesting that at this moment he is talking with Darryl Zanuck about the lead in "Hudson Bay." Personally, I would like to see Paul as the amusing Pierre Raddison—a role that would give him popularity with not only the so-called highbrows but with the masses. He is now reading the script, and it won't surprise me if he checks into Twentieth Century-Fox for the Hudson Bay movie on which Darryl Zanuck is spending so much time and effort. One thing about Muni, he has the courage of his convictions always and no one in the world can move him once he sets his mind on any step in his career.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Niven Busch, Twentieth Century-Fox writer, and his socialite wife, Phyllis Cooper, are about to tell it to a judge. She was the 24-hour bride of Onslow Stevens; Helen Ericson, the blonde beauty who left the screen to marry Phil Berman, the furrier, has a date with the stork in September; Linda Darnell and Garrett Craig, young W. B. player, are dueting; Kay Williams, the Chesterfield girl, and Dan Dailey are a secret romance; Jane Larkin and Dick Foran are acting as if they mean it; Sidney Guilaroff and Laraine Day are pricing engagement rings; Edward Arnold has lost 38 pounds and is down to a mere 256.

Steffi Duna and Dennis O'Keefe have everybody on the "Girl from Havana" set wagering it won't be long now before they do an altar march; Ann Sheridan burned herself badly in lighting a cigarette when the match caught under her fingernail; Gladys Cooper, famed British actress, and Philip Merivale attracting much attention at Ciro's. Also Florence Rice and Dalies Frantz; Foris Kean's daughter looks so much like her mother when Doris was the boast of New York in "Romance" that many people commented on the resemblance. Doris sent $300 to add to Ouida's fund and Claudette Colbert, $500; Vivian Lubitsch's birthday gift to Ernst, a steam cabinet, which will help him keep the waistline down.

Helene Whitney, the Fortescue gal who went into the movies after her divorce, will be sued by her former husband, Julian L. Reynolds.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Opens tomorrow morning.

CRUISES by moonlight and daylight are scheduled by the S. S. Mount Vernon. Trips down the Potomac to Marshall Hall amusement park with an hour-and-a-half stopover at Mount Vernon sail from the Seventh street wharves at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Moonlight trips every evening except Mondays and Tuesdays sail at 8:30 with McWilliams' orchestra aboard for dancing. Kiddies' days every Friday and Monday.

New Satire Is Bill at C. U.

Now the consistently evocative Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University has spiced its rewarding summer sessions with a new satirical comedy, "Art and Prudence." Walter Kerr, of the school's faculty, is the author and he has written knowingly and wittily of the tangles that beset, of all things, summer dramatic schools. Last evening's premiere will be followed by a second performance in the University Theater at 8:30 tonight. And it's a play with more of a future than tonight, too.

It is in the hurly-burly of the ecole George Abbott that this promising and dizzy piece exists. Its characters are those unfortunate wretches who are prepared to die in the attempt to be actors. They have developed alarming mental attitudes through their charlatan of an instructor and are ready to believe anything their conniving minds can conjure. When a sincere and successful New York actress arrives to spend a week with them on Ibsen her generous impulse turns to bite her. Her business-like husband-elect very closely gets inaugurated and all sorts of involved pother arises.

Father Hartke Directs

Last night's performance under Father Gilbert V. Hartke was an exceptionally well-oiled first time. Despite definite overtures into farce, as in the happy burlesques of choral reading, through a particularly capable boy-girl scene in the final act the play remains essentially a comedy. Caricatured as some of the figures are, the play's theme is more comic than farcical. It is this blend which has yet to be made smoother.

The cast has its accustomed stage legs from the very first. Josef Draper and his wife, Charlotte Gloer, have come from the New York stage to bring a communicative assurance as the charlatan and the wholly natural heroine. Beatrice Prince is particularly effective in the well-written role of a hard-boiled friend of the victim, while Charles Grunwell's easy-going Hollywood scout reveals an improvement in a single summer which this young localite has not shown in the several years we have observed him. Marion Wolberg is charming as the ingenue, particularly in her scene with the likeable James Graham in Act III. James Towey's businessman is also a worthy drawing.

Others in the company include William McGuire, Charles Steinmetz, Mary Agnes Bier, Kay Becker, Margaret Drach, Margaret Riseling, Gloria Regan, Joseph Kennedy and Jack Troy. The serviceable and amusing set was designed by Ralph Brown.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 31.

AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT in Washington this story is being told now, inasmuch as Ambassador Bullitt won't return to his post in France. It concerns Bullitt's close friendship with the President—to which the State Department points in explaining the Ambassador's reporting to the President, upon his return here, instead of to the department . . . During the battles in France, Bullitt would send strangely innocent cables to the President—cables such as "Sarah, Aunt Dora, Elliott, Buzzie at Reims." It was a code, reporting exactly how many French planes were stationed at various cities—in this case, Reims. The number was computed by adding the respective ages of the members of the Roosevelt family mentioned in the cable.

JEROME FRANK, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, is slated to be named to the Circuit Court of Appeals, succeeding Judge Patterson, who is resigning to become Assistant Secretary of War . . . Lunt and Fontanne were interested in appearing in the movie version of "Escape." Norma Shearer, however, insisted upon doing the leading role, and so the film company offered a contract to Alfred Lunt to appear opposite Miss Shearer. He declined.

MACK GORDON AND HARRY REVEL formed a song-writing partnership seven years ago. Within a short period of time their hit songs brought them national recognition—and the team of Gordon and Revel went to Hollywood, to work for Darryl Zanuck . . . Last year they decided to separate. Mack Gordon then began writing songs with a number of free-lance composers, until he found a new partner—Harry Warren, of the veteran team of Warren and Dubin . . . Harry Revel also worked with free-lance lyricists, and now he has found a new partner—Al Dubin, of Warren and Dubin.

LAWRENCE DENNIS, America's first Fascist writer, is publishing his newest book himself. His publisher decided, at the last minute, not to place its imprint upon Dennis' book, and so the author secured an assignment of the plates and will release the book under his own imprint . . . A writer with whom Alfred Hitchcock wanted to confer agreed to lunch with the director last week. When he arrived, he discovered that Hitchcock had invited four others to lunch and wondered how they'd ever be able to confer privately. Hitchcock brought the five guests to the St. Regis. "Table for six?" asked the headwaiter . . . "No," the director told him, solving the conference problem, "I want three tables for two."

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, now in New York for a short visit, sometimes walks in his sleep. In Key West, or in Havana, where he sleeps in a ground-floor bedroom, his sleep-walking presented no problem. But here, where Hemingway lives in a hotel room high above the streets of Manhattan, he realized that sleep-walking is dangerous . . . "If you ever catch me walking in my sleep," he told a friend, "wake me up immediately." . . . "But how?" he was asked . . . "Oh, it's quite simple," Hemingway informed. "Whenever you see me walking around in pajamas—just stop me, and say: 'Dr. Hemingstone, I believe.' That always wakes me up."

NOW THAT THE ELECTIONS IN MEXICO have been held, without a revolution, John Steinbeck will return there for a short stay, to complete the movie he has written for Herb Kline . . . HEYWOOD BROUN, JR., will be the editor of a swing magazine . . .

H. L. MENCKEN, who contributes a column about the American language in the Saturday Review of Literature, will discuss in the next issue the glorified names now being used to describe common occupations . . . Norman Cousins, one of the editors of the Saturday Review of Literature, saw an advance copy of Mencken's column and wrote to him, suggesting that he include the descriptive "Sanitary Engineer," now being used instead of plumber . . . Mencken replied that he had checked upon "Sanitary Engineer" and decided against including it because he felt it wasn't original, and probably was coined by some newspaperman years ago . . . That descriptive first was used in an article, "Why Not Call Them Sanitary Engineers," written by Commissioner Fassler, of the city's building department. Norman Cousins, then a newspaperman, "collaborated" in writing that article.

Willard Group Rings the Bell In Mystery Hit

By Nelson B. Bell

There is another factor to be reckoned with in the Capital's summer scheme of things theatrical.

After an interval of something like six years the Willard Roof Players came back to life last night, atop the Willard Hotel, in a remarkably effective performance of Ayn Rand's three-act murder mystery, "The Night of January 16." Perfectly patterned for the sort of informal interpretation it was given—with the jurors chosen from the audience, principal characters "planted" throughout the house and the adjacent Roof Tavern Club affording uncommonly appropriate entr'acte relaxation—this familiar courtroom drama should enjoy a long and prosperous run. Unless otherwise announced, performances of the play will be given on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings each week at 9 p. m. The play and the manner of its enactment are sufficiently praiseworthy to justify enthusiastic attendance for at least as long a period as was enjoyed by "The Drunkard"—also under the auspices of Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Willard, and Bess Davis Schreiner—way back there in 1934, if that is precisely when it was.

Jury Supplies Climax

"The Night of January 16" reaches its climax in the verdict of the lay jury, after all of the conflicting and involved evidence is in, for or against Karen Andre, accused of the murder of her multimillionaire employer, whose character might have been suggested by either Krueger or Lowenstein. The court procedure is according to Kent and Blackstone, and the whole baffling business is pretty perplexing. Last night's jury found the defendant not guilty—to the evident approval of the considerable audience present and the apparent outrage of the presiding judge, who ordered their names stricken from the list of those eligible for jury duty for a period of five years. That happens no matter which way the verdict goes, so what?

Utmost praise is due the admirable cast assembled by the management for the interpretaion of this exciting melodrama. Thomas M. Cahill looked and sounded the learned Judge Heath to the life and had two able advocates before him in John Van Sikken, attorney for the defense, and Robert Truitt Miller, as the prosecuting attorney. The defendant was handsomely played by Maxine Mitchell and sterling witnesses took the forms of Robert Pollard, J. Martin Scranage, S. Carlton Ayers, Wayne Bobst, Frances Brunt, Elinor Evans, Maurice Jarvis, Hugh C. Smith, Morris Arkin and Elise Carnor. The support was uniformly excellent.

Congratulations to all concerned.

Shifting Winds

There are increasing indications that the Presidential race will be very close. Preliminary tests of public opinion contain no suggestion of another landslide such as Mr. Roosevelt achieved in 1932 and 1936. On the contrary, the stream of announcements for Mr. Willkie from dissenting Democrats continues. Samuel Seabury, New York City's distinguished foe of corrupt political machines, and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith are among the most recent figures to join this procession.

A Gallup poll in California shows that the President is still the favorite in that State. But it also reveals a striking drop from 63 to 54 in the percentage of voters who show a preference for the present incumbent. The first poll was taken before the political conventions and the second since both parties named their standard bearers.

In some measure this startling shift of sentiment in California may reflect the volatile nature of public opinion in the Golden State. That little American empire on the Pacific is notorious for its love of novelty. No one will forget that under its sunny clime the Townsend plan blossomed and the ham-and-eggs scheme sizzled for many a day. In 1928 California's vote was not far short of 2 to 1 for Hoover. Four years later that State piled up a huge majority against its favorite son.

So part of California's doubtful mood may be attributed to the inconstancy of Hollywood and its suburbs throughout the State. Yet this can scarcely be called a complete explanation. The once staid and dependable Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is manifesting similar political instability. A recent Gallup poll in that State, which not so long ago made a hero of George Earle, showed Wendell Willkie leading President Roosevelt by 52 to 48. The shift in sentiment in Pennsylvania since the conventions is little less pronounced than is the case in California.

As the campaign progresses this trend may be halted, or it may become more emphatic. At the moment it is a headache for those who must soon secure a successor to Jim Farley.

Suffrage Compromise

Remarkable progress is being made toward approval of the Sumners resolution permitting a grant of suffrage to the District. The sincerity of the House Judiciary Committee in taking up the resolution was amply demonstrated by the consideration it was given on Tuesday and by the committee's agreement to meet again this morning to continue its work.

Now Chairman Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee has given the proposed amendment a hearty indorsement. His promise that it will receive immediate attention as soon as action in the House has been completed will go a long way toward preventing any attempt to sidetrack the measure in the Senate. At last the District seems to be assured of a clear-cut showdown on the issue of extending the American democratic system to the Nation's Capital.

Every member of Congress giving attention to this proposed amendment wishes to safeguard the basic right of the National Legislature to control the Capital City. This caution is quite understandable. But there is nothing in the Sumners resolution that would in any way impair the authority of Congress to deal with any situation that might arise. Indeed, if the amendment errs it is on the side of caution. For it would not grant the District an absolute right to representation in either the House or Senate. It would merely permit Congress to make such a concession to voteless Washingtonians.

That special arrangement can be justified by the peculiar status of the District. From the local viewpoint it would be preferable to have positive rights written into the Constitution. But if the Sumners resolution is approved by two-thirds of both the House and Senate and ratified by 36 States, there can be little doubt that the District would soon be exercising the right to elect Congressmen and Senators. Nor can it be doubted that some arrangement for home rule would be worked out.

The Sumners resolution is a compromise between the national and local viewpoints. But it is an intelligent compromise which is entitled to full support by local civic groups and Congress alike.

Looking Before Leaping

Thoughtful consideration of the conscription issue is producing salutary results. The Senate Military Affairs Committee has voted to exclude more than two-thirds of the men covered by the terms of the original Burke-Wadsworth bill. Senators are making a conscientious effort to adjust the measure to the country's actual defense needs.

That attitude cannot be interpreted as any softening of the determination to safeguard this country against attack from any source. The people demand adequate defense, even to the extent of compulsory military service, if that is necessary. Congress has shown itself fully responsive. Yet it is also properly concerned with the preservation of individual liberties that would necessarily be infringed by conscription.

None should assume that those opposing the Burke-Wadsworth bill, or working for restriction of its provisions, are disinterested in national defense and the preservation of democracy. The strongest advocates of the bill are those who anticipate aggression from outside the United States. Many of its opponents have taken their stand because they fear internal weakness more than any threat from across the seas.

There are strong convictions, too, that our most formidable problems are not military in nature. For example, the American Friends Service Committee, which does not believe that fighting solves difficulties, has organized a volunteer service to give young men and women an opportunity to serve their country in a civilian capacity. The volunteers will enlist for a year without pay, in some instances providing their own expenses. Some will aid in rehabilitation of impoverished farm and migrant families; others will be assigned to public welfare institutions and various types of humanitarian work.

In times of great emergency a nation cannot rely entirely upon voluntary effort. But even in this period of stress and danger those who value freedom will be alert to prevent an unnecessary triumph for the un-American principle of compulsion.

Secretary of War Stimson is quoted as telling the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday that the system of voluntary enlistments has proved "a costly failure." The voluntary system, he continued, "not only is inadequate but disruptive of industry and agriculture and the sciences and specialties on which the Nation must depend in time of war." In his zeal to insure an adequate defensive force the Secretary overlooks the fact that such complete distrust of voluntary service is an essential characteristic of the totalitarian philosophy.

Admittedly, an efficient dictatorship is far less costly than democratic government. So long as men are willing to endure it with good will, compulsory service is more effective than free agency. But our Government was founded on the principle that public authorities should coerce citizens only when essential to preservation of national security, internal order and justice between individuals and groups.

If an unquestionable need for conscription to safeguard the Nation can be shown, Congress ought to approve it without hesitation. But the change in age limits in the Burke-Wadsworth bill from 18-64 to 21-31 shows that Congress is properly apprehensive about going too far in this direction. Further debate on this very fundamental issue may well show that still other limitations and safeguards are equally desirable.

A Valuation Of Value

A very ingenious sales argument is advanced by Mr. Smith Davis, a Cleveland broker, who has undertaken to negotiate the sale of the New York Yankees to the syndicate said to be headed by Mr. Jim Farley himself. The fact that the Yankees are no longer the peerless and invincible aggregation of ball players they were a year ago, says Mr. Davis, makes them that much the more valuable.

As long, he argues, as the Yankees were snatching away pennant after pennant by mid-July, and taking four World's Series in a row, they had a relatively limited appeal to the masses. The daily proceedings were reduced to little more than formalities, and you could almost write the season's box scores and the final club standings on the first of every April. Now, however, the Yanks are wallowing pitifully at bottom of the first division, and there is, on almost any given afternoon, an almost even chance they will be beaten. After all, isn't it uncertainty that makes a ball game and attracts the cash customers?

Maybe there's a catch somewhere, but it seems a very plausible argument. Perhaps it is time for a drastic revision of our notions as to what comprises value. Perhaps book shops and librarians, for instance, should begin recommending books in direct ratio to their dullness, for, come to think of it, there is no particular merit or distinction to be gained by reading a book that is interesting.

Bond salesmen, as they used to do with Latin-American issues, should again make a point of recommending those which are in gravest danger of default. Then, when at last all civilization comes toppling down, the investors who have been thus wisely counseled will have less to lose than the holders of gilt-edged 3 per cents.

Political candidates should seek nomination to office on the ground that they are unlikely to be elected and, therefore, unlikely to injure the State or Nation. Teachers should be chosen not for learning, but for ignorance, since pupils will experience greater intellectual stimulus and exercise through the necessity of having to learn everything for themselves.

By the same token, newspaper readers should avoid editorials that discuss weighty and important matters, and confine themselves to those which are based on frivolous or irrelevant themes. As a case in point, the consequences of being misguided or misinformed by what you have just read will not prove serious.

The Blockade Of Europe

It is not inappropriate, at this moment, to recall that "freedom of the seas" was the issue primarily responsible for American involvement in the last war, and that the second of President Wilson's famous Fourteen Points stipulated "absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas outside territorial waters alike in peace and war. . . ."

Little or nothing has been heard of the doctrine during the present war, primarily because our neutrality legislation tacitly eliminated it in advance as a principle of American policy. Nevertheless it is worth noting that such freedom of the seas as remained for neutrals is now further curtailed by the extension of the British blockade which went into effect last night.

Hugh Dalton, the minister of economic warfare, summarized the new program when he told the House of Commons, on Tuesday, that "we must control not only shipping approaching the Mediterranean or the North Sea but all shipping crossing the Atlantic." It is not merely a matter of clamping the blockade down on Spain and Portugal, heretofore relatively immune, but also of applying it, again in Dr. Dalton's words, "to certain Atlantic islands or certain neutral ports of North Africa."

The justification of this British action, which in times past would have been bitterly resented and properly challenged by the United States, is purely one of extreme emergency. Great Britain has no right under international law to demand that an American ship trading to Portugal be certified by a British consul. And the British minister of economic warfare has no right to announce calmly that any American ship not so certified "will henceforth be liable to seizure by our patrol."

American public opinion, however, recognizes that Great Britain is now fighting for life against an implacable foe. And sympathy with the British in their very real peril will prevent the protest which might legitimately be made. Acquiescence in this high-handed British policy is a part of the "measures short of war" by which the country is gladly giving Great Britain all the assistance the neutrality laws permit.

Whether the tightened blockade will suffice to cripple the German war effort is another issue. It will undoubtedly increase shortages of essential commodities in countries like Spain and France, where gasoline is already almost unobtainable and where increasing deficiencies of food are all too apparent. But the presumption is that Germany and Italy will see to it that they are less injured than the countries which their alliance dominates.

Britain's new war measure will probably increase the tempo of the vicious German attack, designed to hammer and starve Great Britain into submission before the winter multiplies the grave difficulties of the Axis powers. But the deeper moral of this ghastly contest in strangulation is its further emphasis on the impossibility of confining modern war to countries willing to be belligerents.

The German seizure of Denmark and Holland, the British blockade of Portugal and Spain, alike illustrate that neutrality is of value only to those powers strong enough to enforce respect for what were once euphemistically described as "neutral rights."

Age Of Steam

From the Fayetteville Observer

Is there to be a return from the age of gasoline to the age of steam?

With railroads changing over to Diesel engines to propel their streamliners a veteran airplane pilot, Capt. H. B. Rueschenberg, has invented a steam airplane engine which he claims is superior to gasoline engines in economy of fuel consumption and speed.

What is more important at the present moment is that the steam engine lends itself to much more rapid production than the gasoline motor because it has fewer parts and the captain believes 50,000 planes a year with steam engines would be easy.

Another factor is that the steam-driven plane is virtually noiseless and bombers so equipped could have their explosives hurtling on sleeping cities before the doomed inhabitants could be warned to rush for the air raid shelters.

What a pity in this advanced age and time that every new invention has to be measured by its ability to cause destruction and human suffering.

Health Preparedness

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For more than ten years a group of physical education teachers have inspected annually the boys and girls in the junior and senior high schools for obvious physical defects. Despite the use of all the motivating devices that the present educational system offers, many of the important handicapping physical defects persist among our youth.

The health statistics of the 1918 draft showed that about 47 per cent of the Nation's young men were physically unfit for military duty. We presume our young women were similarly unfit. A great deal has been done by democratic methods to remedy this national defect, but a great deal more of corrective effort is necessary. In totalitarian states, social measures are enforced to relieve the physical defects of failing vision, teeth, hearing, posture and chronic infections.

All of the dentists put to work in Washington over a period of several years could not wipe out the dental or focal infection areas in the mouths of all the children. What more serious physical and mental defects exist the next draft figures will probably reveal.

In the great cry for defense preparation through vocational training, let us not forget that physical and mental illness and debility resulting from lack of prevention and remedy undermine our capacity for work or war. Over 50 per cent of our school boys and girls have defective teeth; 20 per cent have poor vision and nearly a third of the underprivileged are malnourished and suffer from infections of mouth, nose or throat.

'God Bless America'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The new song, "God Bless America," is having a great vogue. When I hear people singing it I wonder why more people do not help God to bless America by helping out in the business of keeping America a good place to live.

This involves more than singing a song. It involves supporting good men to run for office, in voting, in opposing poor administration of our country, and, in general, taking an interest in local and national affairs.

I believe God is interested in America, but I also believe that its destiny is controlled by the way the 130,000,000 Americans think and act.

JOSEPH S. KIMMEL.

Pan-American Hopes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The statesmen in power in the United States of America today are looking hopefully, if not frantically, to the so-called republics of South America. The hope is wistful; the fear is real.

The countries of South America are racially, nationally, religiously and commercially far and away more closely and indissolubly linked up with the powers that be in Europe than they are with the people and Government of the United States, and it requires no special gift of prophecy to see that in any real crisis the said links will be the forge from which will come the final militaristic link.

The gaze of hope and expectancy of the statesmen of the United States toward South America will sink into the gloom of despair—sullen and unrelenting. For any effort in that direction, the United States will pay the bill and hold the bag—empty and disappointed.

Life In Netherlands

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gradually private correspondence is now coming through from the Netherlands, presumably by clipper and, of course, censored by the German authorities. It is interesting to read some of the information contained therein, supplementing the very scant press dispatches which occassionally leak through from the much-troubled Low Countries. The disruption of communications and the danger of air attacks by the British seem to be among the main troubles. Surprisingly enough it was sometimes possible for the mobilized, even during the days of heavy fighting, to call their people at home by telephone. However, generally telephone, telegraph and postal services were stopped during the campaign. The danger of air attacks results in blackouts every night, and because the country is now on the German daylight saving time, which lengthens the summer days by one hour and forty minutes, people retire almost at daylight. Service with the air defense is heavy: the hours being from 8 p. m. until 4 a. m. every day for the military. The civilian air defense groups are also being kept busy. Windows are pasted over with paper strips to prevent cracking of the panes. A feeling of intense isolation resulting from the very poor international communications prevails throughout the country.

Music And War

To The Editor of he Post—Sir: I note in The Post of July 26 an editorial touching the action of the French in Syria in shutting off jazz and swing so-called "music." What an excellent move this is. And why could not this be followed in this much-abused country, where we must either shut off our radios most of the time or have our ears tortured by this tin-pan type of "orchestra" or the squalling or bleating of female and male type of "singer." Save the mark!

To many of us who are invalids or otherwise shut-ins, the radio is a blessing, but not when the great majority of the programs are made up of this kind of hideous noise.

When the greater part of the musical efforts is made up of these raucous noises or blatant sounds, it is really tragic for those who really enjoy music. It need not be Bach, or any ancient composer, though they are most enjoyable, for there is much very excellent tuneful modern composition. But we hear these once or twice and then no more, while the tin pan, saxophone tootles keep on day and night, unless we shut off the radio and enjoy a heavenly peace. Listening to such rackets in the name of music, no wonder the world is driven to crime and war. Even a peaceful old lady like myself, who would not hurt a fly, entertains desires to commit murder when forced to listen to such noises.

Praises Auto Inspection

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A year ago, in the annual automobile inspection, I was rewarded with a red sticker on the theory that my wife's heel might catch in a hole on the floor mat of our car and thereby cause an accident. When it was patched and the red badge had been removed, I wondered why the examiners could not have ignored this slight defect.

Today my car, apparently in perfect condition, was examined and the center nut holding the steering gear was discovered to be ready to drop off—this despite regular lubrications at service stations.

Henceforth, no one shall convince me that these inspections, which are required yearly by the Traffic Bureau, are not of real value in the prevention of serious accidents.

Commends 'Our Town'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Section VII, "Our Town in Pictures," in The Post of July 21 has come to my attention, and I wish to compliment you on the excellent manner in which the story of the District National Guard was presented. It was a splendid job. No similar presentation that has come to my attention can compare with it in effectiveness. You are to be congratulated.

The National Guard of the District of Columbia is fortunate, indeed, in having such an earnest sponsor as The Washington Post.

Havana Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the most apropos statement of the Havana Conference of Ministers was made by Leopoldo Melo, delegate from Argentina, relative to an American system or hemisphere protection. The United States led a proposal for the Americas to step in, if need be with force, to prevent possessions of European nations in the Western Hemisphere from falling into the hands of another European power. This to prevent British, Dutch and English colonies from being seized by Germany.

Melo pointed out that he was opposed to this suggestion on the basis that the peoples of these European possessions in the Western Hemisphere had not voiced their opinion. He felt it would be manifestly unjust to propose and install a plan on which the collaboration of the people directly concerned had not been solicited nor received.

Consultation with representatives of the colonies involved would not jibe with the plans and aspirations of the assembled ministers, particularly those from the United States. Were these peoples asked, no doubt, it would not impress them to be under the so-called protection of the United States in preference to that of any other country. Certainly, United States interest is no more humane or altruistic than that of Britain, Germany, etc. Our capital would be sent to exploit the resources and peoples of these countries, as well as would German capital. And, of course, this is an excellent time for the United States to step in—Britain and Germany are busy fighting over there and we are conveniently located over here to make our force easily felt.

And, from all indications and news coming from Havana, our delegates are not letting one issue slip by without imposing the wish of their country very forcefully. Backed by the obvious superiority of the United States in the New World, it is plain to see what plans will come forth as a result of this conference.

My Aunt Anna

I USED to love those Saturdays, after a whole week of school, when I could take the Lexington Avenue street car all by myself and go to visit my Aunt Anna.

I could wear my blue coat with its two enormous gray buttons in the belt which I thought were very stunning indeed and the envy of everyone, young and old, who beheld them.

We lived on East 80th street in what my mother apologetically described as "the nicest-kept house on the street" because it was just east of Third avenue. My aunt, whom I believed at the time to be enormously wealthy because my uncle had a cigar store on 116th street, lived in a house with two white lamps at the entrance and very highly polished brass letter boxes. Besides, there was a thick, coarse mat in the vestibule with the number of the house woven into it and you could not get beyond the door until someone ticked the button from upstairs and let you in.

My aunt with her two white poodles always stood at the top of the carpeted stairway on my arrival and in her customary manner kissed me resoundingly as the two dogs wagged their tails so hard that their whole rears waggled. But as soon as my aunt got the dogs inside the door, all the mystery and excitment of my Saturdays would begin.

"Did he say anything?" my aunt would ask immediately.

At once I knew whom she meant. It was her landlord, a bearded old rascal who used to open his door when he heard someone going upstairs, and shout, "Do you think this is a hotel, running up and down the stairs all day long? This ain't a hotel."

My aunt said he was worried about people using up the carpet and advised me to shout back. Then she would shake her fist and shout, "If it wasn't wartime, he'd never be so independent with his high rents."

When my wraps were hung away, my aunt would look toward the parlor. "Well, ain't you gone in to say hello to Mrs. Burt?"

Mrs. Burt, a German cleaning woman, had been with my aunt for years and though Aunt Anna always complained that she did not even know how to hold a dust cloth, she kept Mrs. Burt on, and gossiped with her at the parlor window evenings, long after the cleaning woman was through with her work.

I went into the parlor, my aunt following close behind, and at her heels the two dogs.

"Come on and have a coffee with us, Mrs. Burt," invited my aunt.

Mrs. Burt consistently put up a thin protest.

"Never mind, the room will still be here when you get back. Come on," insisted my aunt. But just before leaving the parlor, my aunt would stop in front of the sofa and look at both of us.

"Betcha you can't guess what I got here," she would say mysteriously.

Of course, both of us knew, for we were well acquainted with her excellent pastries and habit of hiding them behind the sofa.

She would burst into violent laughter, and with one twist of her body, pull the sofa halfway across the room. There, just as we had guessed, were jugs and basins and bean pots heaped with cakes, carefully protected under towels. When she slipped off the covering to expose the browned and sugar-sticky pastries, the fresh warm scent of butter, cinnamon and sugar had even the dogs wagging their tails and sneezing with delight.

"Ach, Mrs. Lesser," the cleaning woman would exclaim in despair, "how dit you effer get so much sugar?"

"Gotta be smart," my aunt winked, giving me a sound kiss. "Come on, Mrs. Burt, grab that pan of cakes."

"Who would like to see a picture this afternoon?" said my aunt, making big eyes at Mrs. Burt. "Clara Kimball Young is at the Regent."

I knew she meant me, but I never let on.

The first act on the bill was acrobatics, something only to be tolerated, according to my aunt, until the show got on.

Next a singer came on, a woman in a midnight blue sequin dress that glittered brilliantly in the spotlight.

"Some figure!" my aunt whispered to me.

"There are smiles that have a naughty meaning
"That the eyes of love alone can see . . ."

But sentimentality was not my aunt's fare. She liked stronger stuff and would not even clap on the curtain calls, an omission which always embarrassed me, for it showed that I could not distinguish between a good act and a bad one, since Aunt Anna's standards were the only ones admitted.

The next act opened with a tramp tumbling out on the stage. My aunt had nothing but contempt for this kind of act.

With the next act a young man in a straw hat dashed from the wings, and a girl from the other side.

"I beg your pardon," began the man in the straw hat to the girl, "haven't I met you somewhere before?"

I thought the girl was wonderfully good looking in her little yellow summer dress and white slippers, but my aunt mumbled down to me, "she ain't a chicken any more."

They tap-danced under a rose spotlight and sang a soft song about a love nest, but my aunt wouldn't even listen. She was filled with disgust.

When at last the acts were over and the theater blackened, the orchestra men slipped down under the stage. A general rustle went through the audience, and I recognized even in my aunt's shifting and final relaxation in her seat that she looked hopefully to the movie to fill all the gaps left by a poor vaudeville bill.

As for me, I had not been let down one bit. I had enjoyed every glittering moment of it.

Carrozzo's Record

BY THIS TIME it is not news that the American Federation of Labor issues union charters which are frankly and notoriously used as warrants permitting the holders to rob the public treasury, the workers in the unions, workers who are excluded from the unions but permitted to work under special license of the racketeers, and the general public. But proceedings are now going forward in the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice against a racketeer in Chicago named Mike Carrozzo, which deserves special attention.

It is futile to expect that William Green or the present executive council of the A. F. of L. will do anything to delouse the house of labor, but the interests of the public, and especially of working people in and out of the union movement, cannot be asked to mark time until the next annual A. F. of L. convention on the offchance that the parent organization will get religion and do something about a filthy criminal condition which has been not merely permitted but actively abetted by the American Federation of Labor.

As these dispatches have reported before, Mike Carrozzo is a gunman and gangster who lived in the heart of the old levee district, or line, in Chicago for several years when the area around Twenty-second street was a horrible stew, exclusively given over to vice. He ran saloons in the district and was an associate of the late, unlamented Jim Colisimo, who introduced chain-store methods to the brothel business.

CARROZZO LANDED in the United States in 1906 from Montaguto, Italy, landed in Chicago three years later, reached his spiritual and moral level in the brothel district in 1910, and became a labor racketeer about 1918. He is now so rich—reputedly on graft extorted from the public treasury through conspiracy with crooked paving contractors and money extorted from thousands of poor, docile day laborers, under license of the A. F. of L.—that he owns a farm of 800 acres at Hobart, Ind., with a private exercise track for his race horses, an excellent commercial dairy farm and bottling plant and a pretentious country mansion at Long Beach, near Michigan City, Ind., with an outlying house for the accommodation of his guests.

This labor racketeer's parent union is the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union, which has not held an international convention since 1911. He himself is general representative of the parent union and president of the Chicago district council of the organization, embracing 28 locals. He is also president of the International Union of Pavers and Road Builders, which represents the union side of the paving ring or racket.

MIKE ALREADY is under indictment—one of those Thurman Arnold-Sherman Act cases—in connection with the crooked activities of the paving ring which excluded ready-mixed concrete from paving work in Chicago and fixed the price of public paving at the expense of the taxpayers.

The Federal Government is now closing in on him from two sides, even though he is undeniably strong in the Kelly-Nash Local of the New Deal party of humanity in Chicago. In 1936 he gave $200 to the New Deal campaign, disguised as the purchase price of the shakedown device known as the campaign book.

As to whether he will be convicted, of course, it is not permitted to utter a guess.

Carrozzo's huge income has been under Federal investigation, and last week he put up $277,251 in securities to lift a Government lien on his farm and estate for an income tax claim of $241,088 for the years 1937 and 1938. He has tried to hide the sources of his income, but these are gradually being discovered, and it can be said that he did not grow rich enough to accumulate so large a debt, in addition to a very substantial income which he did not report in his returns, by honest, selfless service in the cause of labor with a capital L.

The intelligence of William Green and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor surely cannot permit them to ask the public to believe that they have been ignorant of the character and activities of Mike Carrozzo, whose problem will be resumed in these essays tomorrow.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"Total Defense" Stalled

LAST FRIDAY the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun, Mr. Phelps Adams, stated that "that great armada of fighting planes which President Roosevelt promised Congress and the American people more than two months ago is not even on order today. The money has been appropriated, the flying services know what they want, the manufacturers are ready to expand, but a confusion of rules has brought about such a snarl that no contracts are expected to be signed for some months."

Mr. Adams went on to say that of the vast sums appropriated for the fiscal year 1941 the War Department has contracted to spend "exactly $900,378 on a handful of two-engined advanced training planes, but that no new contracts have been signed for bombers, pursuit or combat planes of any kind. No one has or, I think, will question the accuracy of Mr. Adams' statements; in fact, he could have gone further. For what he reported about aviation contracts is no less true in the absolutely vital matter of expanding the production of armor plate for the navy and tanks. There, too, the contracts are ready. But they are not signed, and operations, which at best will require years to produce results, have not yet been begun. They have not been begun because the Administration and Congress have not cleared the way for them.

IT IS IMPORTANT to the country that the situation should be understood. For even if this particular obstacle can be removed by a sufficiently loud protest from the country, the state of mind which has produced it will raise up new obstacles. The fact of the matter is that the politicians and the bureaucrats in Washington, while professing to put "total defense" above all other considerations, have not yet seriously begun to put the national defense above all other considerations.

At the moment the great contracts to expand the facilities for producing armaments are stalled over the question of tax amortization. But I am credibly informed that while the advisory commission has been struggling with the White House, the Treasury and Congress to remove the tax obstacle, the Department of Justice has been on the point of launching one of the greatest antitrust suits of all time against the oil industry; it has been getting ready to proceed with a lawsuit which would take years to try and would occupy the attention of the leaders of the industry at the very moment when the executives of that industry are being called upon to use their brains and their energy in organizing to produce synthetic rubber and aviation gasoline and a number of other critical commodities. So whatever the Administration's publicity agents may say about it, the fact is that the national defense is not being organized with the full, sincere and single-minded cooperation of the whole government.

THIS IS A SERIOUS charge. But in the light of the known and indisputable facts about the tax amortization question, which has stalled the airplane and armor plate contracts, the charge is, I submit, incontrovertible. And though the tax question is a technical one, no expert knowledge of taxation is needed to see what is the trouble in Washington today.

This in simple terms is the problem: in order to make the new warships, the airplanes and the mechanical equipment for the army, it is necessary to build and equip large additional plants and factories. This requires the investment of new capital, supplied in part by the government through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and in part by existing aviation, steel, and other companies. As regards the new capital to be supplied by the government, the problems have, it appears, been solved satisfactorily. But as regards the new capital privately supplied, two questions naturally arise: first the repayment, or debt amortization as it is called, of the borrowed money,—a problem which is solved in the prices agreed upon in the contract; and second, the question of how in calculating taxes the depreciation, or tax amortization, shall be calculated. This is the obstacle. For without new legislation the tax requirements are such that the companies will not sign the contracts and go to work.

NOW IT IS NOT necessary to discuss the rights and wrongs of just how tax amortization ought to be arranged. There is general agreement. What is holding up everything is the fact that the President and the Treasury are insisting upon tying up this particular tax amendment with the larger general question of the taxation of war profits. And since it might take Congress many weeks to write a general tax bill, the simple and indispensable amendment of the existing laws must wait too, and its enactment must depend on a rough and tumble political debate about "war profits." So the airplanes have to wait, the armor plate has to wait, the navy has to wait, the army has to wait for an amendment which everybody agrees is necessary even to begin to arm this nation.

If some great, disputed principle were involved in the tax amortization amendment, it would still be wrong to tie it up with and confuse it with all the other questions of war finance. But there is no dispute about the amendment. It has been tied to the disputed question of war finance for no good reason at all unless it be the disgraceful political reason that the tax laws cannot be relaxed at all in favor of business corporations without at the same political moment imposing new taxes on business corporations. Whatever the reason, the fact remains that a technical change in the tax laws is being held up even though the whole armament program is stalled in the process. Whatever the reason, it is not a reason arising out of a wholehearted purpose to arm this nation rapidly.

PERHAPS the Administration can be induced to reverse itself on the matter, and let the contracts be signed. But that will not be enough. For new obstacles will arise as long as the President and the Administration and Congress, including leaders of both parties, and the country do not acquire the conviction that the task of arming is urgent and serious and that it cannot be done slowly, half-heartedly, and by men who are not really interested in it to the exclusion of every political consideration.

Such a state of mind does not as yet exist in Washington, and unless the country wakes up and then wakes up its politicians, it is headed for the rudest shocks and most unpleasant experiences in its history. For the fact of the matter is that the nation is passive unnecessarily and inexcusably, while its vital security is at stake in the great battles for the control of the seas. The fact of the matter is that the country is assuming obligations and responsibilities which are inescapable but are tremendous. The fact is that the country is not seriously preparing itself. The Administration which is supposed to realize how critical and urgent is the problem of our defense is, as we have seen, trifling with the armament program. And the Republican opposition in Congress, if one is to judge by its articulate spokesmen, is fast asleep and sunk in dreams of a world that no longer exists.

Thus far the record is not one which the politicians concerned will be able to stand upon when, as is certain, the country eventually calls them to account.

Green Revokes Union's Charter For Rehiring Former Convict

By the Associated Press

A. F. of L. President William Green said yesterday he had withdrawn an A. F. of L. charter issued to a union of New York City fish and sea food workers because the union had reemployed a business agent after he had finished serving a prison term.

Green said the agent was Joseph Lanza, and that he had been tried and convicted and sent to prison by a New York court about two years ago. He declared that Lanza had been employed as the union business agent before he was convicted.

The A. F. of L. leader said the union, by reemploying Lanza, had violated instructions transmitted to it some time ago by William Collins, New York A. F. of L. representative.

The fish and seafood workers' organization, unlike the big national and international unions which make up the bulk of the A. F. of L., is under direct supervision of A. F. of L. officials. Such charters may be revoked or suspended under powers invested in the A. F. of L. president.

The charters of national and international affiliates can be revoked only by an A. F. of L. convention.

White House Asks Johnson to Return To Administration

The White House yesterday urged former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson to return to the Administration with the admonishment that good soldiers "don't go A. W. O. L." but disclaimed knowledge of reports that Thomas Corcoran, New Deal aide, is in California to persuade Johnson to take a job as administrative assistant to the President.

"Personally I hope Louis stays," said White House Secretary Stephen T. Early of the former American Legion chief who left his top War Department job to make room for Robert P. Patterson, a Republican selected by Secretary of War Stimson.

"When there is a battle on, an emergency, good soldiers stay in the ranks. They don't go A. W. O. L." Early said.

Johnson is vacationing at Bohemian Grove, Calif.

PRESIDENT CARDENAS

He called on Mexican workers to accept "flawless discipline." Betty Kirk, in an article on this page, interprets his exhortations as indicating the rise of a new ideology south of the border

Mexican Era Ends

By Betty Kirk

"The State" Replaces 'The Worker'

Mexico City.

A NEW IDEOLOGY is being heard in Mexico today. It is the ideology of "the state" as contrasted with that of "the worker," which has been prevalent for the past six years. This new ideology marks the end of one era and the beginning of a new one.

The new concept of placing national interest above labor interest, accompanied by warnings to labor to subjugate its desires and demands to the dictates of the state or suffer the consequences, came as the result of the first clash between labor and government during the Cardenas regime. It came from the lips of President Cardenas himself, from Vicente Lombardo Toledano, general secretary of the C. T. M., and from Gen. Heriberto Jara, head of the administration's Mexican Revolutionary Party (P. R. M.).

Occasion for the repeated and stern warnings was a sudden outburst of labor conflicts threatening the federal authority. Plans dictated by the government for the reorganization of the national railways, which have been under worker management for two years, and of the oil industry, in the management of which the union has participated, were met with stubborn resistance by the unions. Swift action followed, in which strikes were threatened and the unions refused to accept pay cuts, dismissal of excess personnel and loss of housing privileges, and attributed the entire blame for their failures upon managing councils appointed by the government.

Simultaneously, the Syndicate of Civil Service Workers attacked the actions of the minister of communications and the director of the department of public assistance (charities). Here also strikes were threatened unless union demands and complaints were satisfied.

THE THREAT implied in these maneuvers of labor was a paralyzation of all train, aviation, telegraph and mail service and a suspension of all gasoline or oil deliveries. Hints from the electrical union that it might also strike led to the belief that a general strike was in the offing and that the Cardenas government would be faced with the first national crisis since it took office in 1934. Such a development, occurring at a time of intense political agitation and antagonism, would create a situation filled with dynamite.

President Cardenas' first answer to berserk labor was made at a banquet given in his honor by the Confederation of Mexican Labor. At this meeting President Cardenas went the furthest Left that he has during his career by identifying himself and his administration directly with the C. T. M. and Vicente ombardo Toledano, whose programs have followed faithfully the Communist party line. Analyzing the situation the President declared:

"I consider that the present hour of humanity should be ruled by organized masses with a clear understanding of their destinies and historical mission. But we cannot conceive of the masses gaining the full fruit of their rights and complete exercise of their duties except by mastering their crafts and the acceptance of flawless discipline. Without these qualifications the masses appear before the public as anarchic and incompetent, bring the democratic system into disrepute, and prepare a reign of violence to open the path for totalitarian dictatorship.

"The moment has arrived when it must be understood that the weakening of solidarity and forgetfulness of the community of interest between the Mexican proletariat and the revolutionary regime will provoke a grave crisis for our institutions and the downfall of labor . . . For the moment it is urgent to resolve the economic problems of internal organization of the national railways, of the oil industry, of the civil service employes, of the various industries now socialized or placed in the hands of the workers. This is not only for the good of each case, but to prevent the failure of isolated industries from playing into the hands of the enemy to be used as weapons against organizations, or what is more dangerous, against any intent to reform the present defects of the social order." He concluded by promising support of the proletarian cause to the end of his term of office.

This was followed by Senor Lombardo Toledano's declaration that "the C. T. M. believes that the unions which have had the opportunity to intervene in the national economy should respond to the interests of their own members, to the working classes and to the revolutionary regime. The problems of the railway and oil workers are not just union problems, for with them labor must answer with its conduct to the rest of the proletariat and to the Mexican nation." To this he added that "the C. T. M. has an honor pact with the Cardenas government."

FOUR DAYS LATER, speaking from Queretaro, President Cardenas reiterated his warnings. "The cases of the railway and oil workers are not conflicts between unions and companies, but problems which the railway workers should solve in fulfillment of the obligation they assumed when they took over the administration of the national lines, while the oil workers have a moral and social duty to the revolutionary government and to the entire nation.

"If what the railway workers want is to surrender the lines in order more easily to continue the union conflict, instead of contributing with their strength to the definitive liberation of all workers, let them say so clearly. With regard to public assistance it has long been known that an excess personnel existed and this must be reduced for the sake of economy.

"All workers in the country should take into account the fact that the government is most interested in protecting their rights. Also that it is their duty to see that economies are effected in the industries placed in their care. All must understand that a misapplied union tactic (the strike) or political maneuvers cannot be permitted to cause the failure of the workers."

SUCH CATEGORIC orders to labor to behave itself and not oppose the state mark the end of the era when labor was persistently exhorted to demand and strike for its rights and to seek ever-increasing pay and shorter hours.

No longer is labor the fair-haired boy, at the head of the class. It has been told to put on the dunce cap and go stand in the corner. And the fatherly state, the omnipotent state, stands with the whip hand over its recalcitrant protege. The right to strike, labor's greatest weapon, could be canceled in Mexico today, as it was on July 11 in Chile.

Faced with this dilemma and this challenge, it remains to be seen how labor will react. For the moment the agitation has died down or, more probably, gone underground. But behind the revolt lies the formation of a new labor front, being organized in opposition to the C. T. M. Although this new front, yet unnamed, claims no political affiliations, its program is identical with that of the presidential aspirant, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan. The existence of this front may be the root of President Cardenas' attempt to discipline labor and to curb its power before the opposition ranks are fully formed. Whatever the finale to the picture, the ideology today is new and the era which it heralds one in which the state will unequivocally rule.

Roosevelt-Willkie Talk

By Mark Sullivan

Need For An Understanding

THE MOST important matter before the Government and people at this time is our military and naval policy — long-range and short-range. "Policy" is not the exact word—we have reached the point where policy merges into action.

Momentously associated with this is another matter, about which just now there is increasing thought, and some steps toward action; about which there may be developments shortly. This is: cooperation—or consultation, or understanding, or whatnot—between Mr. Roosevelt and the Republican Presidential nominee, Mr. Willkie. The problem of military policy necessarily overlaps the six months of the Administration in office, and whatever Administration will have power after January 20 next.

A phase of the political problem arose this week. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee had almost completed a bill for universal conscription, the Burke-Wadsworth bill. The committee was expected to report it to the full Senate about the middle of the week. At this point some Senators, Republican and Democratic, suggested that Mr. Roosevelt be asked whether the bill met his views. This meant delay. The condition was reported to Mr. Roosevelt. At a press conference he was asked if he had any comment.

Mr. Roosevelt took a defensive attitude. Rather sharply he said he did not think he was called upon to go into the details of pending legislation; that he had expressed his views in general in his defense message to Congress; that if there is delay now, the blame will be on other shoulders than his.

THE EFFECT of the President's attitude on Congress will be to irritate them, Republicans and Democrats alike. To the ordinary feeling between Democrats as such and Republicans as such is added feeling between Congress as such and the White House as such—the feeling in both cases making for delay, awkwardness, lack of quick efficiency.

Congress will feel that if the President is shy about discussing the details of a pending bill that shyness is something new, and not consistent. They know that as to many measures pending from time to time the President does not hesitate about discussion. They know that in the early days of the New Deal, the practice of the White House was diametrically opposite to the stand now taken. They know the White House, far from showing deference to the prerogative of Congress, actually followed a practice which put Congress in the position of a rubber stamp. They know it was the custom for New Dealers around the President to write out bills in minute detail and for Mr. Roosevelt to send them to Congress and to put pressure on Congress to pass them as written, and to resist changes proposed by Congress.

They recall that Mr. Roosevelt's famous bill to change the Supreme Court was written by persons around him, complete to the last comma; that it was read by Mr. Roosevelt to a press conference before it was read in Congress; that not one member of Congress had any knowledge of the bill until Mr. Roosevelt handed it to the Democratic leaders and told them to pass it.

CONGRESS, recalling all this, will feel that Mr. Roosevelt's newfound reluctance to discuss a pending bill has a political motive. They will feel that Mr. Roosevelt wishes to "pass the buck" to them, to make Congress bear whatever public resentment may arise to the conscription bill or any details of it. Congress is the more disposed to feel this when it recalls that something of the same kind arose last winter, about the bill to give financial aid to Finland—the aid was delayed for weeks while President and Congress each sought to make the other take responsibility for it.

Now this sort of thing is characteristic of our form of government. It goes with a representative republic. Even if the unusual condition present in this case did not exist, even if Mr. Roosevelt were perfectly willing to take a position, even if there were ready cooperation between Congress and President, there would be delay. Democracy takes time.

This the dictators know, and scorn, and take advantage of. The dictators do not need to consult any Congress. The dictators could decide on conscription and announce it and put it in effect, within a day, an hour. For this reason the dictators say they can always conquer the democracies, whether by war or by economic means. For this reason, the dictators say, confidently and sneeringly, democracies must die, everywhere.

WITHOUT MUCH doubt, Hitler timed this war to occur when the United States was involved in a Presidential election; and timed the attack upon Britain with relation to the dates of our two party conventions.

Meanwaile, Rome burns—meaning that Britain is in imminent danger, and that, with Britain gone, we stand before the guns.

To overcome some of the delay, a movement is under way which originates largely outside politics. It is a movement mainly of political neutrals. They aim to set up some kind of neutral liaison between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie. The immediate purpose is to get agreement upon prompt aid for Britain in the form of certain destroyers and other armament, which we now have, which we do not have immediate need for, which is very much needed by Britain, but which can only be transferred to Britain after action by Congress.

Cessation of hostilities in France has not meant cessation of the will to help the French people in the Washington chapter, American Friends of France, at 1210 Eighteenth street northwest.

Under chairmanship of Mrs. Arthur Woods, with the aid of Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, the local unit of Miss Anne Morgan's organization got under way soon after the outbreak of hostilities last fall.

Mrs. Woods served in France in the World War as a nurse with Miss Morgan's ambulance corps. France and the French people are close to Mrs. Dunlap, whose Chateau des Coulennes is 150 miles south of Paris. Early in this war she was named "marraine de guerre"—godmother—by a group of French soldiers billeted near by.

"I hope for means of continuing," was the text of a telegram Mrs. Woods received recently from Miss Morgan through the State Department.

"And we're doing everything possible to help her to continue," Mrs. Woods said. "The fact remains and this is something everyone should know—that at present there is no means of shipping anything to the continent. Our organization is particularly indebted to the Red Cross for allowing us to send two truckloads of relief goods on their ship, the McKeesport, the only vessel reaching France from this country recently.

"People like to give where they think their money will be used immediately. Our problem is to keep up the splendid co-operation we have had thus far, for ultimately everything contributed to us will reach the needy in France."

Rummage sales at the Eighteenth street headquarters have raised a good part of the $5,000 in cash the organization has contributed to the war relief fund. Customers have found real bargains in clothing and even some furniture donated for the purpose.

Novelties—tricolor cigarette cases and decorative pins—are objects of greatest interest. Sold at the rummage sales, and by several leading Washington shops without profit, they have brought the chapter nearly $1,000.

In the words of Mrs. Sidney Thomas, secretary of the chapter, the pins are "not only helping the French people, they're the smart thing to buy." Vogue and Harper's Bazaar have devoted pages to them.

While interest continues unabated through the summer, the attitude of the group is summed up by Mrs. Wood who says "We'll work and be patient."

This is one of a series of articles on civilian war relief agencies active in Washington. The District Red Cross chapter is not included, as its work has been described elsewhere by The Post.

U. S. Releases Escaped Nazi War Prisoner

International Law Saves German From Being Returned to Canada

By the Associated Press

Bangor, Me., July 31.—The first German war prisoner to make a swimming escape to the United States while en route to internment in Canada was saved by international law today from being handed back to his enemies.

Federal officials held 25-year-old Kurt Reich, a captured submarine machinist's mate, for several hours today in the Bangor jail before releasing him "unconditionally." Immigration authorities examined the possibility of deportation proceedings against him, but whether they still were considering any action was a secret they would not divulge.

After he leaped overboard from a British prison ship in the St. Lawrence River—July 15 and swam to safety a United States boarder patrol seized him at the Maine border.

Attorney Arthur Teele, of Boston, had him freed of illegal entry charges under an international law holding that a neutral power receiving escaped prisoners of war shall allow them liberty.

Reich was the second of the hundreds of prisoners for Canada reported as escaped en route to internment. The other dived through a porthole—"scuttled himself," the British guards said—and was lost at sea.

6 Americans Believed Nazi War Prisoners

Vichy, France, July 31 (AP).—James V. Sparks, commander of the now substantially disbanded American volunteer ambulance corps which served with the French army, said tonight that six Americans were believed still prisoners of war in Germany.

They are Albert Raymond, of Chicago; Louis Wherle, of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Phillips Muhr, of Philadelphia; Lawrence Jump, of Lowell, Mass.; Enrico Pagnotta and Jean Billee, both of Paris.

During the war, 35 drivers were captured, but 29 were released. Of that number, all those now making their homes in America are en route to the United States.

He added that nine Americans were killed in the course of the war.

Briton Sees 'State' As 'Biggest Employer'

London, July 31 (AP).—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin predicted today "the state is bound to become the biggest employer" in Great Britain.

Bevin, a labor leader of 30 years experience, said the government had found it necessary to throw out many inefficient managements to speed up factory production for war needs.

Bevin asserted that industrial England never would be the same and that it would be impossible to fall back into the old incompetencies.

U. S. Envoy Drives Bus To Escape Nazis

Baltic Delegations Arrive in Moscow

Moscow, July 12 (AP).—Delegations from the Baltic states, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, arrived in Moscow today for a session tomorrow of the Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, which is to grant them admission into the Soviet Union.

The delegates received an enthusiastic welcome. Moscow's streets were beflagged and planes flew overhead.

The three states, which came under Russian military domination last year, recently elected Communist governments committed to union with Russia, to which they belonged before the World War.

British Release Food for French

New York, July 31 (INS).—Three shiploads of food and clothing for French civilian war sufferers which were seized by the British blockade and interned in English ports, have been released with the consent of the senders here to be distributed among 75,000 French refugees who have fled to England.

This information was revealed today by the United Committee for French Relief, which assembled and shipped the 546 cases of food, clothing and other necessities on three freighters in late May and early June.

Capitalites Keeping Cool on Cape Cod

Gertrude Lawrence, Sponsoring Group at Dennis Summer Theater to Help British Soldiers, Adds Glamour to Routine Task

A letter from a Cape Codder contains, along with envious references to the delightful coolness of Massachusetts resorts, some interesting news about Washingtonians.

The correspondent reports that sports and war relief work are keeping everyone busy. Societies to help the British soldiers and sailors have been set up all over the Cape, the most unique being that established at the Dennis Summer Theater by Gertrude Lawrence. The attractive stage star has conceived the crowd-drawing idea of having a star from the Dennis Theater supervise the sewing group every Tuesday afternoon, with a guest star assisting. Naturally this adds glamour to otherwise routine work.

Miss Lawrence's marriage last month to Richard Aldrich, producer and owner of the Dennis Theater, was of particular interest to Washington. Both frequently visit friends in the Capital.

At Nonquitt, on Buzzard's Bay, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, sr., is entertaining an international household of relatives. Her daughter, Mme. Rene van Swinderen, is with her, as is Mrs. Hoyer Millar, wife of the British Embassy official, and her three children. Jonkheer van Swinderen is Netherlands Minister to England.

Mme. Loudon and her two year old daughter, Henriette, is a frequent visitor in Nonquitt, the letter says. Mme. Loudon's sister, Mrs. Stanton Whitney, whose husband is a professor at Groton, has a house there.

Sailing, golfing and tennis are going on "in a light fog which keeps the Cape cool," according to our correspondent. Mrs. William Ritter of Washington is very active at the Oyster Harbor Club in Wianno. Miss Betty Huidekoper, daughter of the Reginald Huidekopers, is chairman of the Swimming Meet and Field Day to be held August 5 at Nonquitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard—his latest book on Germany, "Into the Darkness," recently appeared—have returned to their summer home at West Dennis after a visit to Mrs. James Van Alen in Newport. The latter's daughter, Princess Louise Murat, promises a visit to Washington this coming season, according to our correspondent.

Mr. Stoddard, equally well known as a lecturer, is doing broadcasting for the New England Town Hall this week. Maxim Karolik, whose Washington home was purchased by the Dwight Davises two years ago, will entertain at a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston this week-end in honor of Mrs. Stoddard.

Mrs. Charles Pynchon is spending the season at Quisset on the Cape and has her daughter, Anne Ellis, with her. The latter was formerly a champion tennis player but now has deserted this activity to devote herself exclusively to music.

And in Washington—the Shoreham Terrace is crowded every evening with diplomats and government officials, as well as what few residents are still in town. The other night Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean, wearing the Hope diamond, of course, sat at a table with Senator Robert Reynolds and her daughter, Miss Evelyn McLean, who wore a blue and white polka dotted print. Two young men joined them later and one of them did an expert rhumba with Miss McLean.

The Finnish Minister danced with his wife on his first evening at a night club for many weeks. . . . A stag of Argentine and Brazilian diplomats came in and sat down together . . . Joseph Paul-Boncour, new member of the French Embassy staff, shared a table with Robert Pell of the State Department and Mrs. Pell. All in all, it would seem as though diplomats just aren't leaving town this summer.

The Build-Up

"Art you very tired, darling?"

"No, why?"

"Well, it's just been so hot and everything—here, let me fix that light so it won't be in your eyes. Do you think that fried chicken's going to agree with you?"

"I guess so. Why?"

"Nothing, only I think you ought to be so very careful this hot weather about what you eat. Did you have a hard day at the office?"

"Not especially, why?"

"Nothing, only I think you ought to save yourself more. Another thing, I think you ought to get outdoors more."

"I don't have time."

"Well, you could go out and play golf this week-end."

"I thought you wanted me to spray the rosebushes and trim the hedge——"

"No, it's too hot. Besides, you don't get the right kind of exercise that way. I wish you could get more tan. You always look so wonderful when you're tanned."

"Say, what are you driving at?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all. It's just that you're such an athletic type that I think you ought to get tanned in summer."

"I'm all right."

Besides, you ought to keep up your golf. You'll lose your form."

"Well, of course I'm no expert, anyway."

"Oh, but you could be! Anyone who can make a 50 under par—"

"A what?"

"Well, whatever it was you made that time you played with Mr. Goober. Anyway, you really ought to keep up your golf."

"I will. Say—where's the paper?"

"Right there on the table. It hasn't been unfolded. Oh say, you were exactly right about what you said Hitler was going to do!"

"Well, I usually size those things up pretty accurately."

"What?"

"Your hair's coming in a lot thicker in the back since you've been using that Porcupine Oil."

"No! You're not kidding? "

"No, it really is thicker."

"Do you see any new hairs?"

"Yes, lots of them."

"Well, well! I thought I felt 'em coming in!"

"They're there all right—say, just one thing before you start the paper!"

"Yes?"

"Well, I was downtown today looking at fur coats—you know my old one's simply falling apart . . . and besides you can save oceans of money by buying now . . . and, anyway, I had only intended to get a mouton or something like that . . . and then I happened to look at the real beavers . . . and they're really a much better bargain everybody says . . . and they last so much longer, even if they do cost a lot more, that they're really economy in the end . . . and since a fur coat is really an investment . . . and since everything is so uncertain and everybody says you can't tell what is going to happen . . . and prices may be a lot higher next year . . . and . . . well, anyway . . . I . . . was just wondering . . . that is, if I wouldn't be saving money in the end . . . by . . . by just getting the beaver?"

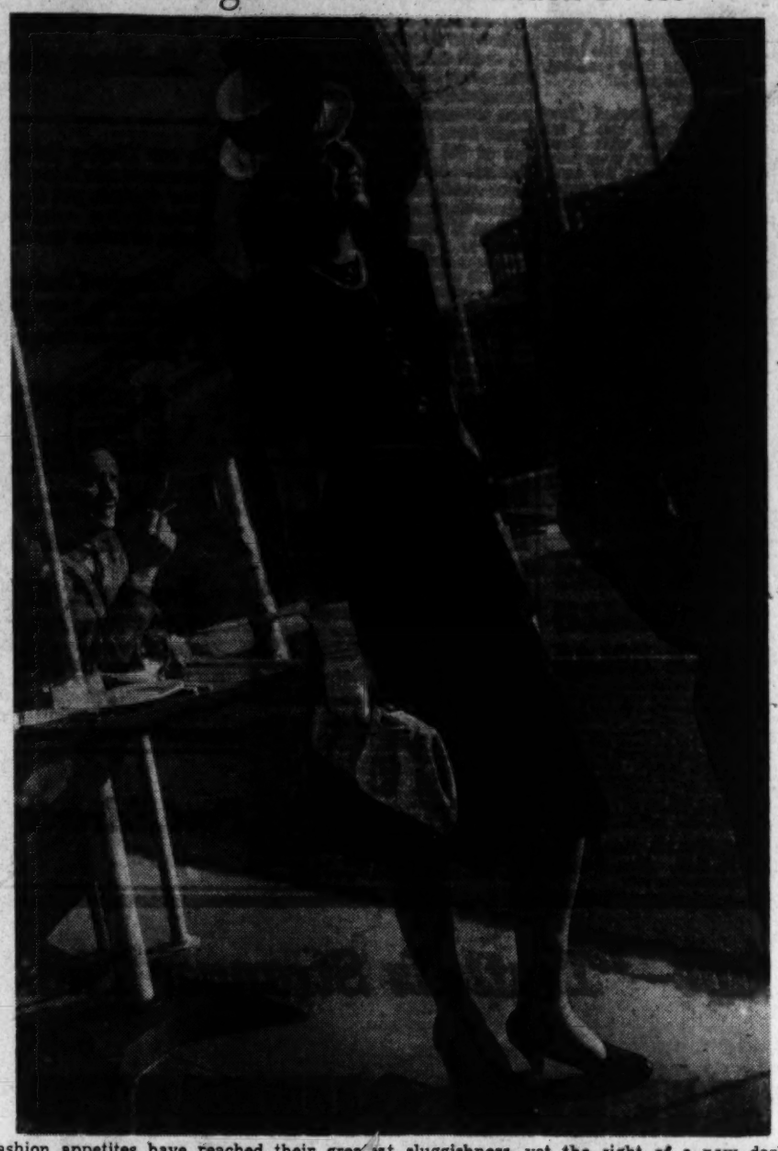
With August—the First Black Dress



Fashion appetites have reached their greatest sluggishness, yet the sight of a new dark dress, if it's simple and cool, can arouse the laziest hot weather victim. A successful between-season black silk is the one above, snapped at the World's Fair while the wearer was off guard. You can see she's getting all the masculine attention because she's in advance of the style parade yet looks well appointed with her white accents

A Woman's Washington

By JEAN BROWNELL

IN the early days of American trade Peter Sutton established a mule train route across the Pennsylvania mountains. He took with him manufactured articles from Philadelphia, established credit by distributing them along the westward route, then on his way back collected his customers' furs and tanbark to exchange for manufactured goods in Philadelphia. When barter went out of fashion, he settled down and established a bank.

Mabel White

Each generation of his descendants has produced someone who inherits his financial sense. Currently it's his great - great - granddaughter, Mabel Sutton White, member of the brokerage firm of Slauson, White & Rowe. Her clients number several hundred; most of them women. She herself is more conservative than any of them. Most of them have inherited a modest sum of money and want to triple it on the stock market immediately; she lets them use a small portion of it for speculation but insists that any profit they make be put into conservative long-term investments.

Her biggest problem is getting women out of the financial jams which result when they fall for some gold brick scheme; they get into such scrapes without consulting her, then call on her to help extricate them. She herself invests widely—in the same securities she offers her customers. In private life she is Mrs. Don W. Slauson, her partner's wife.

STREET SCENE—Small girl in the eyeglasses-and - dental - brace stage, walking down F street mumbling, "I don't like people to look at me, I don't like people to look at me."

"Your grandfather would have scoffed at the possibility of the telephone; your grandmother would have believed in it." That's how Earnest A. Grant, president of the American Federation of Scientific Astrologers, explains women's interest in occult subjects and the relatively small number of male addicts. Attendance at the astrology classes he has been giving at the Raleigh for three years is about 70 per cent feminine.

"Women are philosophical; they have a sense of dependence on the Supreme; their approach is emotional," Grant explains. "Men approach such things with a closed mind. They demand material proof."

His best pupil is a Washington society woman who recently inherited a large sum of money. "But, of course, she wasn't surprised," he says. "We had gone over her astrological chart and knew just about when it would come and how much it would be."

Ever since the Public Health Service opened its propaganda drive on cancer, she had spent her days addressing and mailing out literature on the symptoms and treatment of the disease. Then she herself became a prey to the fears that haunt so many women. She recognized the symptoms, but dread overcame common sense. Six months ago, still refusing to undergo treatment, she died of cancer.

Country Salad Plate Stimulates Languid Appetites

LAST SUNDAY almost everyone was being an escapist from the heat—and from preparing meals. I found a cool retreat and delicious food down Mount Vernon Memorial Highway at spacious old Collingwood. Carroll L. Wilson, special assistant to the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wilson were among those entertaining. The guests were Undersecretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, and daughter Ann; Mr. and Mrs. Lorraine Batt, of Philadelphia, who have recently come to Washington, where Mr. Batt, nationally known authority on engineering, is serving on the Advisory Council of the Defense Commission; their sons Bob and Bill; John B. Wilson, Special Advisor, Commodities Credit Corporation and Mrs. Wilson.

A Country Salad Plate had been selected by the Wilsons for the main dish. This is a cold plate to stimulate the appetite, for it contains Virginia baked ham, sliced tomatoes and tangy potato salad. The meal started off with a chilled fruit cup, which was a medley of fresh fruits. With the salad plate came light rolls, and an assortment of relishes, including pickled pears.

Pecan pie was the dessert for the supper. The recipe for this delicious concoction may forever remain a secret with the chef, Elijah, but the recipe for making the potato salad he will share. These are Elijah's directions for making his flavorsome salad.

Potato Salad

Boil 1 quart of potatoes with skins on and allow them to cool before peeling. This will make the potatoes waxy rather than mealy, which is better in salad making. Peel potatoes, cut in small pieces, and mix with 2 teaspoons minced parsley, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon minced pimiento, 1 cup diced celery, and salt to taste. Pour a thin mayonnaise over all, mixing thoroughly with spoon and fork. Chill thoroughly for serving.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 17, Loves Boy, 19, Once Involved in Theft; Now on Probation From House of Correction, He Is Drinking Some; Is Her Faith in Him Misplaced?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school girl now 17 years of age. For the past three months I have been going with a boy whom I consider to be a very nice boy. In order to give you some idea of my problem, it is necessary for me to tell you parts of the boy's life.

About two years ago he was mixed up with a gang of bad boys. These boys stole a calf and were caught. He had nothing to do with the actual stealing, but he drove the truck in which it was taken away. He and two of the other boys were committed to a house of correction. About seven months ago, his former employer secured his release under bond, brought him home and gave him a job, where he has worked ever since.

Mother disapproves of my going with this boy, although I have begged her to give him a chance to build himself up and start over again. Father is more understanding and sees things my way. The boy had been behaving fine until Saturday night, a week ago, when he came to see me after he had been drinking. He wasn't drunk, please understand, but he had taken some drinks. I talked to him in a kind way about it, and he promised me he would not drink again. I firmly believe he means it and have confidence in him.

He has asked me to marry him, but I have told him I believe we are still too young; and that we cannot know yet whether we want each other for sure. He is 19. He was very reasonable about this, accepting my viewpoint. And he and my father get along fine together. But mother says if he were making a real effort, he wouldn't have been drinking. She keeps harping on his past, but I tell her the past is over and should be forgotten.

Now, here is my problem: Should I tell him that we must stop going together? Or should I go on seeing him? I love him dearly and he seems to care as much for me. Some people might call it "puppy love," but we feel we are getting old enough to know real love. Please advise me as soon as possible. Sincerely.

DORCAS.

Girl, 15, Whitewashing Boy in Her Thoughts

DEAR DORCAS: I think that you should, indeed, give up your sweethearting association with this boy—not in any spirit of uncharitableness toward him, but because you have a prior obligation to yourself, to preserve your own moral and emotional integrity.

Beyond any doubt, the boy's weakness of character—which leaves him susceptible to whatever winds of influence may blow—does, and probably will continue to, present a serious problem in social behavior (or maladjustment) for some altruistically interested persons to work with.

But genuine emotional detachment is the first requirement on the part of those who are to have any success in stabilizing weaker or more wilful characters. Such detachment is necessary (1) for seeing clearly the faults (as well as the good points) that exist; and (2) for ministering to the ailing personality in a constructively influential way.

Already you are emotionally so involved with this boy that you are sentimentally condoning everything pertaining to his weakness. You say he "had nothing to do with the actual theft"—except that he drove away the stolen goods! You attribute his part in the conspiracy to the fact that he had innocently come under "bad" influence. You accept his word that he never will drink again—simply because he listened attentively while you gave him a tender lecture.

In other words, it is growing increasingly so necessary for you to think only the best of him, that you are whitewashing him constantly in your own thoughts. And this is where you do damage to your own integrity. You are beginning to think in muddy fashion, for the reason that you dare not think clearly, lest you come face to face with the bitter truth—to-wit, that he is not a boy whom you can respect and trust and admire.

He is merely a boy who happens to cast some spell over your emotions, and because that is so, you are trying to fool yourself that the ugly facts of his performance really aren't true, or that they have no essential or prophetic significance. And to that extent you are being dishonest—which is a characteristic first price you are paying for becoming emotionally involved with an evasive, unstable personality.

It is fine of your father to extend a charitable, hopeful-of-the best attitude toward the boy—but as between his attitude and that of your mother, I think the latter's is indicative of greater intuitive wisdom, so far as your welfare is concerned. She anticipates heartbreak for you, if you let your young life become intimately entwined with the boy's life—and I am convinced that her fears on that score was justified. M. H.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Travel Make-Up

DURING two or three days on a train your beauty schedule is upset. You cannot go through your usual lavish home regime. But you can adopt a few simple measures that will keep you well groomed and lovely.

If the water on the train is too hard, forego soap and water cleansings. Instead, soak your face with cleansing cream, tone with an astringent and before retiring pat on a good rich night cream to eliminate dryness that comes with a change of temperature or climate.

The hair may be cleansed with a dry shampoo and may be kept soft and bright by spraying with brilliantine. At night pinch the curls or waves in place and tie a cool fishnet turban around the head. These are good wardrobe adjunct for daytime, too.

Several times during the day, bathe your eyes with a weak solution of boric acid. You can keep the lashes and brows fresh with a bit of white vaseline or olive oil.

When lips become too dry, apply colorless pomade or lotion before smoothing on lipstick.

Madame Chairman

FRIDAY of next week, Ann Mills and Bertha Carruthers, of the World Y. W. C. A. staff, will arrive in Washington to establish the first branch office of that organization ever maintained in this Capital.

Miss Mills and Miss Carruthers, who have been at the international headquarters in Geneva, are British members of the staff and left Switzerland early in June for London, where they have been since June 26, awaiting passage to America. They sail today aboard the Excalibur on which the Duke and Duchess of Windsor also will be passengers.

The headquarters of the World "Y. W." will remain in Geneva for the present, in charge of Miss Ruth Smallwood, who was in Washington last autumn, and Mrs. Evelyn Fox, American members of the staff. Thanks to their American citizenship, they can move about freely as citizens of one of the belligerent countries could not.

Miss Carruthers and Miss Mills will be at the headquarters of the Washington Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, until plans are made for establishing their own offices here.

LIKE CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME—The influx of women workers in the national defense program and the census has taxed the room registration department of the local Y. W. C. A. July, which is usually a dull month so far as the demand for rooms goes, this season has rivaled cherry blossom time and the week of the D. A. R. Congress.

There are about 600 rooms listed with the "Y. W.," all of which are investigated by the room registration committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frank W. Ballou. When a landlady applies to list her rooms, two members of the committee take her application, visit the place and give it a rating. If it does not meet requirements, it is not listed.

One of the problems the "Y. W." is helping some of the newcomers to solve is that of what to do with their children. Among the women coming to the Capital to take positions have been a number with children.

It is not easy to find a landlady who will assume responsibility for the youngsters during their mother's absence at work, and neither is it a simple matter to locate someone who will come in by the day and care for them. This is all part of the service the "Y. W." gives, however.

COMMUTERS—And, speaking of the "Y. W.," the general secretary, Elizabeth Haney, has just completed a three week seminar course for Y. W. C. A. secretaries, given at the national headquarters in New York. She and Esther Stamats, general secretary in Baltimore, commuted to New York City two days a week to attend.

MEMBERS of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday heard from Mrs. Arthur D. Condon herself of the part she took in forming the resolution on the foreign policy of the United States, adopted in the platform of the Democratic Party at the Chicago convention. Mrs. Condon, the only woman delegate from the District, addressed the club's study group yesterday morning.

"As I sat in the resolutions committee," she said, "thrilled to hear the arguments and discussions, one sentence suddenly held my attention: I could not get away from it. It was: 'We will not send our Army, our Navy or our air force to fight in foreign lands outside of America.' I felt that such a sentence, if read by leaders of foreign countries, would lead them to believe that they could establish air or submarine bases in Greenland, Martinique and the many foreign islands close to our coasts."

She told of how she begged the men sitting near her to oppose this wording but they insisted she do the talking. Finally, despite a hoarse voice, she spoke. As a result of her proposals, a compromise was reached and the additional words were inserted, "except in case of attack."

The Strange Case of Dr. Westrick

Co. under the name of W. G. Elicker, the assistant secretary of the company.

In applying for a driver's license on May 3, Dr. Westrick set down in his application alongside the question, "Business address," the following notation, "H. M. Oldis, 135 East Forty-second street," the address of the Texas Co.

The diplomatic list issued by the State Department gives Dr. Westrick's official business address as follows, "Herr Gerhard Westrick, commercial counselor, and Frau Westrick, office of commercial counselor, Whitehall Building, 17 Battery place, New York City."

In this license application, too, the doctor, in reply to the question, "Are you crippled in any manner," replied, "No." It is generally known that Dr. Westrick lost one of his legs in the World War.

It is known that Capt. Torkild Rieber, chairman of the board of the Texas Co., has met Dr. Westrick frequently since his arrival here. It was recalled that Capt. Rieber persuaded the Nazi government to turn over to him three oil tankers in payment for some oil which he had sold them before the outbreak of the European war and that with the assistance of the German authorities he was able to get them out through the British blockade.

It was also recalled that during the Spanish civil war he preferred to sell large shipments of oil to the Franco-Fascist regime instead of the loyalists and is understood to have been granted practically a monopoly in the supply of oil to Spain as part of the consideration for this favor. All efforts to see Capt. Rieber at his offices with the Texas Co. in connection with his negotiations with Westrick have been futile.

So well, however, does Dr. Westrick think of his relations with the Texas Co. that a couple of weeks ago, while visiting the Scarsdale Service Station, at Weaver street and Heathcote road, Scarsdale, about half a mile from Dr. Westrick's Scarsdale home, he remarked to Fred Crisp, one of the owners of the garage who had performed various services for the doctor, "I'm sorry I cannot buy oil from you because, you see, I am a lawyer for the Texas Co. and must buy my oil from them." Crisp sold only Atlantic gasoline.

Among the more recent of the automobiles that drove into the Westrick driveway was a Rolls Royce with liveried chauffeur, bearing the license number, C B 7, N. Y. The records indicate that the owner of this car is Philip D. Wagoner, president of the Underwood Elliott Fisher Co., manufacturers of typewriters and accounting machines.

The car drove in at about 6 p. m. on July 27 and the occupant talked with Dr. Westrick on the lawn for about an hour and then drove away.

On June 16, at about 11 p. m. a Studebaker bearing the license No. 4 Y 4376, N. Y. drove into the Westrick driveway and its occupant entered the Westrick home and remained many hours. The car, according to the State records, is owned by Reinholt Maron, of Buffalo, 26-year-old mechanic employed by the Artcraft Iron Works, of Buffalo. The works do not have any war orders yet, it was reported.

Average Citizens Also Call on the Doctor

On June 9, at about 6:30 p. m., a Packard car with license No. A 2271 N. Y., entered the driveway and its occupant entered the Westrick home and remained far into the night. The car is owned by P. H. Langfeld, of Rochester. Langfeld is about 30-years-old, is of German extraction and is not an American citizen. He is employed at the Eastman Kodak Co. in Rochester and his father is manager of the Kodak plant in Berlin.

Another visitor was a car with license number Z W 817. This was a Connecticut number, the car belonging to Carmen Downey, of Stamford, according to official records. Downey and his wife are employed in the Electrolux factory at Old Greenwich.

An occasional visitor to the Westrick home was also E. A. Tretzger, vice president of the Underwood Elliott Fisher Co.

Callan, whose home the Westricks now occupy, is a lawyer associated with the firm of Shearman & Sterling, 55 Wall street, who are counsel for the National City Bank. He is living at Chatham, Mass., for the summer.

The Westricks were extremely anxious to keep their presence in Scarsdale a secret. When Frank Clapper, an inspector for the water department of Scarsdale, went to read the water meter in the house on May 11 and inquired who was living there then, they declined to give him the new tenant's name and merely told him to send the bill to Callan.

The name of the tenant was also withheld from the records of the real estate board to avoid publicity, an unusual procedure, it was said in Scarsdale. Miss Julia Bracalello, associated with the real estate firm of Mrs. Byron Parks, who handled the lease, said that she had not been informed that Dr. Westrick was connected with the German government and that Callan, she was sure, had no knowledge of Dr. Westrick's connection with the German government.

After the Westricks moved into the house, it was learned, they would have none but Irish servants because of their traditional dislike of the English.

Dr. Westrick is one of Germany's most noted lawyers. He is a law partner of Dr. Heinrich Albert, who is remembered as the chief German propaagandist in the United States before this country's entry into the World War. He is 51 years of age, weighs about 160 pounds, is 5 feet 6 inches tall and has green eyes and gray hair. He speaks excellent English with a slight accent and is a man of most ingratiating and charming manners.

He has made many trips to this country before and has represented the interests of many American business firms and banks in Germany. He came to this country this last time by way of Russia and the West Coast, landing in California sometime in February.

Upon his arrival in this city early in April he took up his residence at the Hotel Plaza. After a few weeks he disappeared from his hotel and bobbed up at the Carlyle, under the name of Dr. A. Webster. It was explained that during his stay at the Plaza he received so many unwelcome calls that he was compelled to register at the Carlyle under an assumed name.

His activities while at the Carlyle consisted, so far as could be learned, of visits to Washington for conferences with attaches of the German Embassy and trips to other parts of the country. It was reported that he had visited Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, German Consul General in San Francisco, who was the close confidant of Hitler and his special representative in London before the outbreak of the war. It has been generally understood that Wiedemann's chief mission was to organize isolationist propaganda on the West Coast and that even the German Embassy was subject to his unusual powers.

Dr. Westrict registered at the Waldorf on June 17, taking a suite of three rooms, one reception room and two bedrooms. Both he and the Baroness von Wagenheim registered as coming from the German Embassy in Washington. His wife, Imtrud, and his two sons, Klaus, 9, and Peter, 6, arrived in New York about two weeks after he came to the city.

bulging the sides around its cowcatchers. The impact had forced the coach about 200 yards back down the track."

Russell Steffy, another eyewitness, said he was standing 50 yards away.

"I saw they were meeting on a single track and I knew they were going to crash," he said. "I saw the freight train drive the "doodlebug" 'way back down the track—perhaps 200 yards. The "doodlebug" immediately caught fire. It spread fuel all along the track in its retreat, and freight cars and ties started catching fire, too.

Flames from the coach leaped high into the air. A friend told me that they played hoses upon flaming bodies thrown out at the impact."

The gasoline car had made connections at Hudson with Pennsylvania passenger trains from Cleveland and Pittsburgh. The freight was northbound from Columbus, Ohio.

Coroner R. E. Amos identified the following dead:

Lawrence C. Letzkus, Pittsburgh; E. C. Clifford, Cuyahoga Falls, O.; W. P. McKee, Akron; Russell Way, Akron; Charles Bilderback, baggageman, Orrville, O.; Nelson Vaughan, Cuyahoga Falls; Cameron Morris, Cuyahoga Falls; Bruce Kelley, Akron; E. W. Gibbons, Endicott, N. "Oh, dear," cried one of the players in the tournament, "if I had only bid three spades on this hand. I am sure we would have been top. It was foolish of me not to."

"What happened?"

"The opponents reached four hearts and made five, and I am sure if I had opened with three spades I would have kept them from bidding it." She spread the cards out on the table. "North and South were vulnerable and, sitting in the West seat, I was the dealer."

The cards:

	♠ 2 ♡ A K J 9 5 ◇ K J 6 ♣ J 9 5 4
♠ A K Q J 4 3 ♡ 7 4 ◇ Q 4 ♣ Q 10 6	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 9 7 6 ♡ 10 6 2 ◇ 10 9 8 2 ♣ 8 7 2
	♠ 10 8 5 ♡ Q 8 3 ◇ A 7 5 3 ♣ A K 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ♠

"I certainly didn't want to bid against the no-trump contract when I was the dealer, and after they bid four hearts I couldn't come in with four spades. Besides, it would have been too expensive, as we probably would have gone down four for a loss of 700 points (honors aren't counted at duplicate), and North and South made 650 points for their vulnerable game and overtrick.

"Now, if I had only opened three spades as I should have, it would have been awfully difficult for North to climb over it with a bid of four hearts, vulnerable, not knowing where the rest of the strength was. And when it swung around to South, about the best he could do would be to double, though there is no assurance from his hand he can set me. Oh, dear, and to think we would have been top!"

The woman folded up the cards and went off to tell another spectator.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills

2 Picket Lines Halted To Aid Defense Work

Teamsters Agree To Continue Hauling Of Brick in Area

Unions involved in a strike affecting 2,100 brickyard and construction workers agreed with Labor Department Conciliator Howard Colvin last night to remove picket lines from the Social Security building and the Navy Yard because of the close association of the projects with national defense.

Members of the Teamsters Union, Colvin said, also have agreed to continue delivery of brick from six brick plants in the Washington area whose operations were restricted yesterday when 500 yard workers went on strike.

Colvin said the agreement with pickets of the Building Supply and Material Yard Workers Union and with the teamsters who had refused to take brick through the lines will expire on Tuesday unless the strike is settled.

The strike is the immediate concern of the brickyard workers, who, according to Richard Moreschi, secretary and treasurer of the union, have been seeking to negotiate for six months with employers for union recognition and higher pay.

Moreschi said the workers are paid at a rate that would earn them $12 for a 40-hour week, but are required to work about 55 hours. By today, he said, all workers will be out in the plants of the West Brothers Brick Co., the Hydraulic Press Brick Co., the United Clay Products Co., the Woodbridge Clay Products Co., the Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., and the Washington Brick Co.

Pickets were around all plants yesterday and the bulk of workers called out in at least two, Moreschai said.

Brick laying was halted at nearly ten large Government construction projects when members of the Laborers and Teamsters unions refused to go through brick workers picket lines.

Construction affected by the strike, Kelley said, includes the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., the Virginia Public Service Co. at Alexandria, the District National Guard Armory and housing projects in the vicinity of Navy Place southeast and Fort Dupont. In addition, he said, nearly 35 private jobs have been restricted.

The agreement to call off pickets at the Social Security Building which will provide offices for the National Defense Commission, and at the Navy Yard was reached after Colvin had conferred for nearly three hours with representatives of employers and unions.

The brick companies were represented by Louis Ottenberg, W. F. Kelley, H. Winship Wheatley, jr., E. M. Rust, James C. Wilkes and H. E. Stringer. Union men attending were Kelley and L. A. Trainham and A. W. Stream for the teamsters.

Meanwhile, a strike yesterday halted work on a street widening project on I street northwest between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets. About 50 workmen walked off the job in protest against rejection of a union contract by the Union Paving Co., according to Willie Arnheim, representative of the Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Union of the Laborers' District Council.

Playwright Gives Leading Ladies Congratulations

Noel Coward, British playwright-director-actor, arrived in Washington yesterday for a 24-hour visit, mainly to carry a message from England to Lord Lothian, British Ambassador.

He managed to find time for a surprise visit to the Cross Roads Theater at Bailey's Crossroads, Va., to attend the first American performance of his "Fallen Angels," which he wrote 15 years ago.

Arriving as the second act was beginning, Coward quietly took a seat in the fifteenth row, sat through the rest of the performance, and joined the audience of 375 in calling out the actors for seven bows.

Word got around that Coward was in the barn-theater, and on a continuous call for "author," he arose and said: "This is the first time I have seen the play in 15 years. I thought it was splendid. The cast did an excellent job."

Later, backstage, he professed amazement that the two principals, Catharine Ryan and Elizabeth Winburn, were amateurs, who worked for the Government during the day. He revealed it was his first visit to an American barn theater and expressed admiration for the setting.

He had some adverse criticism, too.

"I don't like the heat," he said.

McCoach Asks More Inspectors

Would Finance Increase With Pay Of Abolished Director's Post

Commissioner David McCoach, jr., yesterday said he would recommend the $7,000 salary of the abolished director of inspection post be used to increase the building inspector's force.

All of the functions of this job, effective today, will be under the supervision of Col. John W. Oehmann, for many years a strong advocate of an enlarged inspection force.

Col. McCoach said he would place before the Board of Commissioners a proposal the $7,000 be used to hire at least one additional fire escape inspector and additional personnel for the building and zoning offices.

Subjected to a Congressional investigation no less than four months ago in the investigation of the White Court Apartment disaster, Col. Oehmann personally was absolved of blame by the commissioners and has been given the added responsibilites of director of inspection. This will add greatly to the work and importance of his department.

Duties Augmented

The building inspector not only has to worry now about builders who put up nine-story buildings where only eight is permissable, but he now has to see to it that kitchen plumbing is not placed on more than one floor in single family dwellings in "A" restricted areas.

In taking over the new duties, Col. Oehmann will have almost complete control over what takes place in building a home, office building or any other type of structure in the District.

As building inspector, Col. Oehmann concerned himself with the actual structure, elevators that might be placed in the building and the fire escape. Now he has to approve the plumbing, electrical work and even see to it that the furnace does not produce too much smoke.

Optimistic on Budget

One of his big problems will be to obtain more funds to enlarge the electrical inspection service, which has been hopelessly behind for the last two years, and the building inspection division.

It is expected the Commissioners will go along with Col. Oehmann in his budget requests for next year, which will call for additional inspectors in all branches of service.

Radio Broadcast To Spur Interest In Hospital Drive

A radio broadcast to arouse public interest in the Negro Hospital Foundation's efforts to obtain six 100-bed hospitals for colored people in the South as part of the Federal Government's forthcoming $60,000,000 hospital-building program will be heard over a Mutual Broadcasting System network at 10:15 p. m. today.

Speakers will be Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and the Rev. Amos H. Carnegie, founder and executive secretary of the National Negro Hospital Foundation, Inc.

The South, said the Rev. Mr. Carnegie in announcing the broadcast, is "where 10,000,000 Negroes live and where the need for adequate hospitalization of the Negro sick and hospital facilities for the training of Negro physicians and nurses is woeful."

Benjamin Hawley, Long a Federal Employe, Dies

Twenty-two years a Government employe, Benjamin Frank Hawley died in Sibley Hospital yesterday at the age of 81.

He came to Washington from Pennsylvania in 1918 to take a wartime job with the United States Housing Corporation, subsequently worked in various other departments and was foreman of the Senate folding room at the time of his death.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today at his residence, 1305 N street northwest, with burial in Keeneysville, Pa. Survivors are his widow, Mrs. Josephine L. Hawley, and three sons, Roy G. Hawley, of Millport, N. Y.; Burr S. Hawley, of Baltimore, and Charles H. Hawley, of Mansfield, Pa.

D. C. Boy Exonerated In Fatal Shooting

Atlantic City, N. J., July 31 (AP).—Fifteen-year-old Robert Beyer, of Washington, who recently killed a playmate with what he thought was an "unloaded" gun, was declared innocent of manslaughter today by Common Pleas Judge Thomas G. Siddall.

Judge Siddall ruled the Beyer boy's shooting of 13-year-old Jack Leaming, of Philadelphia, was "entirely accidental." Parents of both youths have summer homes here. The accidental shooting took place in the home of another playmate.

Kirsten Flagstad Given Watergate Ovation In All-Wagnerian Concert With McArthur

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Edwin McArthur conducts the National Symphony Orchestra, with Kirsten Flagstad as soloist, Wednesday night at the Potomac Watergate in a Wagnerian program: Overture to "Tannhaeuser," "Einsam in trueben Tagen" from "Lohengrin," "Dich, theure Halle" from "Tannhaeuser," Charfreitagszauber from "Parsifal," Overture to "Die Meistersinger," "Starke Scheite schichtet mir dort" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung," Walkuerenritt from "Die Walkuere," Overture and "Mild und leise" from "Tristan und Isolde."

Had it not been for Kirsten Flagstad, attendance at the National Symphony Orchestra's concert last evening might have been as depleted as it was on Sunday night when a similar uncertainty of weather kept many away from the Potomac Watergate. But apparently no one who wanted to hear the great Norwegian soprano was deterred by threatening clouds on this occasion, and the audience was one of the largest that has assembled on the river bank this summer. Only the contingent of canoes was affected by the possibility of a shower, while on land there were no vacant chairs discernible.

The evening turned out to be ideal for an open-air performance, with a cooling breeze blowing downstream and stars twinkling now and then through the wrack of the late afternoon thunderstorm. Precautionary umbrellas and raincoats were in considerable evidence, but their owners had no cause to use them. It was an eager and demonstrative audience that sat with some impatience through the familiar overture to "Tannhaeuser," applauded mildly, and then released an ovation upon Mme. Flagstad when she came to the stage for her first solo.

The one objection to hearing a soprano soloist in Wagnerian excerpts with an orchestra was obviated by the amplification of her voice through the microphones. A conductor may do his best to subdue the volume of sound in a concert hall, but if he does any justice to the color of the score, he cannot keep the climaxes down to a point where they do not overwhelm the singer. At the Watergate, Edwin McArthur was free to build his climaxes to their full sonority, for Mme. Flagstad's manified voice soared serenly over the harmonic tumult.

Her first selection was "Einsam in trueben Tagen" in which Elsa relates her dream of the silvery armored knight who was to champion her cause against the sorcery of Ortrud. She sang it with an utter simplicity and a complete absence of histrionic striving for dramatic effect. With a change of characterization she then gave glorious voice t. Elisabeth's salutation to the hall of Minnesingers in the Wartburg, "Dick, theure Halle" from "Tannhaeuser."

Her second appearance was in the immolation scene from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" which she sang with a memorable fervor of emotion and a resplendent quality of tone. The power of her personality awakened one's imagination to a vision of the funeral pyre as she voiced the words: "Build up a mighty pile of logs by the river's brim. High and bright kindle a fire that in it may be consumed the body of the noblest of heroes. Bring his steed, that with me the horse may follow his lord." Her projection of the long monologue, with its changes of mood, was a splendid display of vocal artistry.

No less rewarding was her final offering of the evening, Isolde's "Liebestod" in which she reached an irresistible poignancy of emotion. The secret of Mme. Flagstad's greatness is her command of tone on the breath and her freedom from artifice. She exemplifies perfectly the dictum of the eminent German barytone, Karl Scheidemantel, who said that the art of song in its highest perfection produces the impression that it is not an art at all but nature itself.

Edwin McArthur, who is consistently increasing his stature as a conductor, received a fine cooperation from the members of the orchestra in his Wagnerian readings, which included the Good Friday Spell from "Parsifal," the prelude to "Die Meistersinger," and the Ride of the Valkyrs from "Die Walkuere."

The one disappointment of the auditors was in their failure to persuade Mme. Flagstad to sing an unprogrammed number. They should have realized, however, that it is too much to ask a singer to descend from the heights she had attained in her emotional identification with Bruennihilde and Isolde.

1. CONDUCTOR AND SOLOIST—Edwin McArthur pours a glass of water for Kirsten Flagstad, Norwegian soprano, who appeared last night before one of the largest crowds to attend a Watergate concert this summer

2. IN THE AUDIENCE—Norwegian Minister Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were there to hear their countrywoman sing

3. RAPT LISTENERS—An interesting study in expression is afforded by this section of last night's overflow crowd

Held Near Death, Patient Asks Food

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning a certain patient in Providence Hospital called for a man's sized breakfast, though a few hours earlier a doctor had arrived expecting to perform an autopsy on him.

The case—names of patient and physician are withheld by request—had hospital attaches buzzing among themselves yesterday.

It started out late Tuesday night when a middle-aged man was rushed to Providence in a precarious condition. He was gasping for breath from an asthmatic heart attack.

For two hours an interne, Dr. Regis Reisman, applied artificial respiration. Then the patient was transferred to the hospital's new "iron lung." His private physician doubted the man would survive the night. The doctor left, returning at 4 a. m. hoping against hope that the heart attack victim would still be alive.

By 8 o'clock he had not only recovered sufficiently to leave the "lung," but was demanding breakfast.

Worker Slain In Argument Over Water

Steamfitter Hit With Lead Pipe On Project Next To Police Station

Homicide squad detectives last night were searching for a 25-year-old colored man who fled from the new Municipal Center Building yesterday after fatally injuring Jay F. Jett, 45, a steamfitter, by hitting him on the head with a 6-foot lead pipe in an argument over a pail of ice water.

Jett was attacked by the colored man in a sub-basement of the new project next door to Police Headquarters on Indiana avenue northwest. Witnesses told police there was a brief exchange of words, when suddenly the colored man picked up the pipe and struck Jett across the right temple. He died en route to Casualty Hospital.

According to an account of the altercation given police by other workmen, the colored man started to drink from a bucket of water on the floor near where Jett was standing. Jett, it was reported, warned him to "stay away from that water."

A. H. Hanson, of 421 Fourth street northeast, said he heard a thud and turned to see Jett lying on the floor, his head bleeding, and the colored man running up a flight of stairs leading to the street.

Jett's attacker, whose name and addresss were furnished police by the Municipal Center contractors, was employed as a truck driver on the job. His arrest was expected momentarily.

Jett was unmarried and lived at 315 Franklin street northeast.

Unity of Americas Urged for Defense

Close economic cooperation between the United States and other nations of the Western Hemisphere was stressed as a primary defense measure yesterday by Clark Foreman, PWA division director, in a talk before the weekly luncheon meeting of the Washington Lions Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

He said proper cooperation could develop immediate markets for hemp, tin, rubber and other war materials in this hemisphere.

Foreign Trade Group for U. S. Defense Aims

Convention Also Indorses Hull's Reciprocal Program

By the United Press

San Francisco, July 31.—The twenty-seventh Annual Foreign Trade Convention today unconditionally indorsed the Roosevelt Administration's reciprocal trade agreements program and national defense policies.

It approved action of the recent Havana Pan-American Conference.

In the closing business session of the conference, delegates approved 23 resolutions drawn up in committee to help the President and Congress map the future of American foreign trade and readjust trade relations for a new post-war economy expected to result from European hostilities.

Support of the Administration's national defense policies came as a surprise and was voted long after 22 original declarations had been drafted for presentation.

British Attack Prediction

San Francisco, July 31 (AP).—Sir Louis Beale, member of the British Purchasing Commission, told the Foreign Trade Conference that "the mistake should not be made of assuming that the war can be won merely by withholding supplies from Germany.

"Now, even more than six months ago, it is certain that direct attack upon Germany will be necessary to bring about her defeat."

Nevertheless Sir Louis said, the blockade is still "our essential weapon, necessary to reduce Germany's striking power." . . . Poland and France were not beaten by a greater bravery but by tanks and aircraft, and the present war will be won in the mines and factories of a thousand towns and cities."

American industry can meet totalitarian competition in the world's markets and protect the future of free enterprise if it will begin now to rid itself of "laxness and our uneconomic trend toward higher costs," Edgar W. Smith, of General Motors Corporation, told the convention.

Early End of War Seen

Looking forward to an early end of the European war, Smith warned the United States against committing itself to any system of barter, cartelization or other unproved economic process in world trade.

When peace comes, he said, "the world once again will be in the market for a bargain—and America's hope and destiny lie in the fact that the free enterprise system has demonstrated its ability over all other systems to provide bargains."

Yankee traders could overwhelm the dictatorships in a barter contest for world commerce, John Abbink, New York business publisher, declared.

"Pastime of Horse Trading"

He added that "If we once decide that the way to fight fire is with another conflagration, we can set a blaze that will make the barter schemes of all the dictators combined seem like smouldering punks in comparison.

"No other country ever made a national pastime of horse trading as he have."

Abbink challenged the necessity of "political advances" from government funds to other countries.

"There is a trace of sardonic humor," he said, "in one developing facet of Washington's activities. Only a few years ago the banking fraternity was being pilloried for making foreign loans that smelled to high heaven when uncovered in the hot light of subsequent political developments. Now apparently the process is to be sanctified. I question the need or the efficacy of political advances."

Census Lists 25 Top Cities In 1940 Tally

By the Associated Press

Census counters scrambled population standards of America's big cities yesterday to create a "25-biggest" list for 1940.

The list generally includes the same cities as in 1930, but 13 of the 25 have different ranks than 10 years ago.

Houston, Tex., and Denver, Colo., made the grade for the first time, crowding out Jersey City, N. J., and Portland, Oreg. Houston claimed the biggest jump, from twenty-sixth to twenty-first. Jersey City had the worst fall of the big cities, from twenty-third to thirtieth.

In line with forecasts that rural territories, especially suburban areas, were gaining at the expense of big cities, 8 of the first 25 showed losses—Philadelphia, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburgh, San Franvisco, Newark and Rochester, N. Y.

Washington, D. C., won first honors among major cities for population gain, going from 486,869 to 663,153 during the decade.

Preliminary figures—complete except for transients and other minor factors not likely to change standings—give the top 25 places to these cities:

1940 Rank	City	1930 Rank	1940 Pop.	1930 Pop.
1	New York	1	7,380,259	6,930,446
2	Chicago	2	3,384,556	3,376,438
3	Philadelphia	3	1,935,086	1,950,961
4	Detroit	4	1,416,549	1,568,662
5	Los Angeles	5	1,496,792	1,238,048
6	Cleveland	6	878,385	900,429
7	Baltimore	8	854,144	804,874

9	Boston	9	769,520	781,188

Mexican Riot Victim Returns

By the Associated Press

Dallas, July 31.—Leonard M. Durso, one of two American college students shot in the Mexico City election riots, said last night he was wounded when Mexican police deliberately fired into a fleeing crowd.

The slender young diplomatic student arrived in an airliner with his mother, Mrs. Angela Durso, of Union City, N. J. His face was still pale from his days in a hospital, and he walked gingerly as he termed himself the accidental victim of an "unnecessary shooting."

However, he said that after he recuperates, he is going back.

Durso wore the blue jacket of Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., where he is a junior student in the Foreign Service School. He went to Mexico on a scholarship a week before the election to do summer school work at the University of Mexico.

He said he and some American student associates came out of a hotel on Juarez avenue at the moment Mexican cavalry charged a band of supporters of Gen. Juan Andreau Alamazan, defeated presidential candidate. Motorcycle policemen charged up and two carloads of soldiers unloaded in the streets. The crowd started to run. Durso said he and his companions fled with them.

They heard shots, he said, and supposed policemen were firing in the air, but they ducked for nearby doorways.

"I was about a second too late," he added.

As he slumped over, Durso craned his head around in the direction of the shot. He said he saw a man in the two-toned brown uniform of a Mexican motorcycle policeman still firing at him.

"He might not have shot if he had known I was an American," Durso added.

"It was all entirely unnecessary. "The crowd was dispersing without any trouble. There wasn't any need to fire on them. Later on in the hospital, I saw men burned by the phosphorescent bombs used by policemen. I saw children with their heads shot in.

"Up to the time when we went out of the hotel, the day seemed unusually peaceful. We wouldn't have believed anybody was going to fire into those people, otherwise we would have stayed in the hotel."

Durso Arrives in D. C.

Young Durso and his mother arrived in Washington last night at 9:10 via plane. He repeated the story of his painful experience to reporters here. They left 40 minutes later by train for New York.

She was a member of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary of St. Anthony's and of the women's auxiliary of the Sisters of Catholic Medical Missionaries.

Miss Mitchell was educated in parochial schools here and entered Government work, serving 54 years in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the old Pension Office. She was retired in 1927.

Roosevelt vs. Willkie

IF the election were held today, who would win? Would it be Roosevelt or Willkie? Which party is leading in such "key" States as New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Minnesota and California today?

Who's ahead in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia?

Only the American people can give the answer to these questions, and Sunday the Gallup Poll gives you the first State-by-State report on the 1940 election. Results of the first post-convention check-up will be published exclusively in The Post in Washington.

In the two weeks since the renomination of President Roosevelt, the American Institute of Public Opinion has measured the opinion of a cross-section of U. S. voters in each of the 48 States. More than 1,000 field interviewers have questioned farmers and city people, business men in the upper-income groups, clerks, mechanics, factory workers and the unemployed in the middle and lower-income groups, persons who voted for Roosevelt last time, persons who voted for Landon, and young people who have just come of voting age. Each group has been included in its proportion to the voting population. The remarkable accuracy of the Gallup Polls is the result of this scientific cross-section of persons interviewed.

For the first time in history, the public's sentiments on the Presidential candidates will be known State-by-State within a fortnight of the nominations.

Moreover, next Sunday's report will be only the first of a series of political surveys to be offered readers of The Post in the coming weeks of the campaign. You can follow the fortunes of the candidates in further State-by-State Institute tests at regular intervals, and you can watch the country's attitudes on the major issues of the campaign. In addition, the Polls will keep close check on the issues confronting the United States in Europe, Asia and the Western Hemisphere.

As a guarantee of impartiality, the Institute's surveys are supported by more than 125 prominent American newspapers—of all shades of editorial policy—which are prepared once more to publish the facts about American public opinion, whether those facts are agreeable or disagreeable to the individual newspapers concerned.

Watch for the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post and throughout the campaign.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, July 31.—A tough-looking little guy with a mashed-in nose and a queer hobby—he collects antique pencils—threatens to be the first member of the St. Louis Browns to lead the American League at bat since 1922. Raymond A. (Rip) Radcliff is the name.

POVICH

He owns a .370 average at this writing, and among baseball men it is not regarded as accidental, because Radcliff for a half dozen years now has been one of the better hitters in the American League. His is the best average in the circuit and he is now rated as a solid threat, the man to beat for the batting title.

The paradox is that Radcliff and his league-leading average came to the Browns in a trade last winter for big Julius Solters, who had been waived around the circuit during the 1938 season. The White Sox gave Radcliff up in an even swap for the lowly-rated Solters, whom the Browns had obtained from Cleveland a few months before.

Radcliff somehow doesn't look like a model big leaguer. He's short—5 feet 10 inches—and a bit bandy-legged. He could be easily mistaken for one of the old gas house gang. His cap is always askew, his uniform usually dirty and his low-hung pants expose only a couple of inches of leg. But seemingly what he lacks in sartorial excellence he makes up in ability to meet the ball.

"That's why he's a great hitter," Manager Fred Haney was saying of Radcliff today. "He's always meeting that ball. He's always getting a piece of it. He's much the same kind of hitter as Taft Wright—can adjust himself to any kind of pitching. Hits to all fields, and they don't know where to play him. Won't go for bad balls and the pitcher always has to come to him. I don't see any reason why he shouldn't lead the league this year."

If Radcliff does stay out in front of the league's hitters, even Connie Mack will be known as the man who let the 1940 batting championship get away. Mack bought Radcliff from St. Paul at the end of the 1933 season, but apparently underestimated him. Anyway, before the start of the 1934 season, the A's sent Radcliff to Louisville in part payment for Johnny Marcum, an expensive rookie pitcher of that year.

There isn't any disposition to treat Radcliff as a flash in the pan. He's been around. He's 33 now, and he's been in the big leagues for seven years. His lifetime average in the majors before this season started was .310, which is imposing enough.

Radcliff is out of the same Oklahoma country that gave baseball some of its brightest stars. Not far from Kiowa, Okla., where Rip came into the world at a very early age, the Waner brothers were reared. Carl Hubbell is from nearby Meeker and Pepper Martin was playing on the same lots. Dizzy and Daffy Dean and Ival Goodman, other fair ball players who were kids in that Oklahoma section.

Rip batted around in the minors for six years before he got his short-lived trial with the A's in 1934. He came up with Dallas in 1928, was shunted back to Paris in the Louisiana State League, went up to Muskogee in the Western Association and down to Shreveport in the Texas. Dallas called him back and shipped him to St. Paul in 1933 and his .364 average attracted Connie Mack. During most of these formative years Rip was a first baseman, which was strange inasmuch as now his worst fault as an outfielder is his weakness on ground balls.

Manager Jimmy Dykes was willing to struggle along with Rip's poor outfielding in exchange for the base hits that rocketed off Radcliff's bat. Rip hit .325 for the Sox in 1936 and .335 in 1937. He sort of solidified his reputation as one of the league's good hitters when he rapped out a .330 average in 1938.

Last season Radcliff slumped. He hit a mere .264 and his outfielding was not so important that Dykes could keep him in there. But his batting slump was scarcely Rip's fault. "I was sick," he says, "and didn't know it. Doctors found it out last winter, though, and put me on the operating table for a stomach ailment. The operation must have been a success. I'm hitting better than I ever did in my life."

His one-year slump was not the reason the White Sox traded Radcliff to the Browns. They traded him because he stood up for what he thought was his rights. In company with Gerald Walker he insisted on a bonus promised him by the White Sox front office last year if the club's home attendance reached 600,000. According to Radcliff's and Walker's figures, it did. According to the office figures, it was only 593,000. Radcliff and Walker called the front office some very emphatic names. They were both traded at the winter meeting in December.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 31.—Joe Louis is through. He is ready to be licked by any intelligent boxer. Soft living, money in the bank, a distaste for fighting and the loss of his punch have made him a husk of his former self. He is where Dempsey was before the first Tunney fight—honored and sung. But through.

CONSIDINE

If you or Joe don't believe this then you should listen to little Johnny Ray talk these days. Johnny is the manager of Billy Conn. Conn is training at Grossinger's to fight Louis in Pittsburgh in September. Conn and Ray are having difficulty remembering that Conn has a little number named Bob Pastor to fight on the night of August 13. And, in addition, Mike Jacobs, who does the deciding, most likely will put anything that looks like a Louis-Conn fight in New York, not Pittsburgh.

"Sure Louis was a great fighter," Ray readily agrees. "Sometimes I think that even Billy won't be as good as Joe was when he had it. But everything's got to end. The greatest athletes in every sport fade eventually. Around Pittsburgh you'da got your head broke if you said—a long time ago—that some day Hans Wagner would be just another bum around shortstop. It's hard for the average fellow to realize that champions always collapse."

We said something to the effect that Louis seemed to be reversing that truism by collapsing his opponents.

"Listen," counseled Ray. "If Godoy don't get that butt in the first round—and lose all that blood—he'd still be fighting Louis. There's no more killer in Louis' punches. Take the Paychek fight. Louis had three of the cleanest shots at Paychek's jaw I ever saw, so what happened. Paychek was ready to get up after a 2-count on the first knockdown. And after a 2-count on the second. Then they stopped it before much of a count on the third knockdown. I tell you that punch just isn't there any more.

"Go ahead and laugh at me. People who said that the great Dempsey was through, before the Tunney fight, also got laughed at. Look at Ambers, too. Whoever expected him to come out there dead on his feet against Jenkins?"

Ray doesn't think Louis will hit Conn, even with that allegedly medicated punch. "You forget that Billy's still as fast as a middleweight. He can go around a heavyweight like a motorcycle through traffic. He's ready, too."

The last time we heard from Johnny he was rejecting what he enthusiastically said was a $200,000 guarantee from Mike Jacobs to have Conn fight Louis. He was rejecting this fine mala fide offer on the grounds that Conn wasn't ready for Louis.

"I've changed my mind," he explained. "Billy never changed his. He always had it made up that he could beat Louis or any other man. But I wanted weight on him and I got it. Even during these tough days, when we work inside to get out of the heat, he hasn't gone under 180. He's bigger through the chest—I've had him working on weights—and he's hitting harder all the time.

"Billy can't wait to get Louis in the ring with him. When Mike Jacobs first mentioned a Louis-Conn fight, a year ago maybe, I hemmed and hawed. Billy weighed in the 160's then. But when Mike mentioned Louis and Billy heard me start hedging he threw his knife and fork down on his plate and yelled, 'What the——you stalling for? I'll fight Louis tomorrow.'"

We dragged Ray back to the Pastor fight, for no other reason than that Pastor has a first-rate chance of throwing a dead cat into Conn's dream world.

"Oh, Pastor," Ray recalled. "I went up to see him fight in Buffalo not long ago, and if that's the kind of fighter he is Billy might knock him out. And we don't knock out people. He looked slow and flabby to me, and even if he's only five pounds overweight those five pounds will feel like 30 after ten rounds."

We asked him if Conn had ever seen Pastor fight.

"Naw. And Billy won't even look at the moving pictures of him. All Billy says about him is, 'He's a college fellow, ain't he? How can I lose to a college fellow?'"

Tigers Rally 4 Times to Beat Yankees, 7-6

Weird Game Won in 11th By Greenberg

Detroit Remains In Tie for League Lead With Victory; Gomez Is the Loser

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 31.—The Detroit Tigers remained in a deadlock for the American League lead today by wriggling to a 7-to-6 11-inning victory over the New York Yankess, and thereby ending a three-game losing streak.

It was a weird game lasting nearly three hours and requiring the Tigers to come from behind four times before they finally victimized Relief Pitcher Lefty Gomez on two walks and a single by Hank Greenberg.

The Tigers thought they had won the game in the eighth inning when Pinky Higgins tripled with the bases loaded to put them in front, 5 to 4. But the Yankees moved back on top in the ninth, when George Selkirk, batting for Pitcher Spud Chandler, hit a home run with one on.

Murphy Is Slugged

As soon as Johnny Murphy, who saved yesterday's game for Red Ruffing, went to the mound in the ninth, Pinchhitters Earl Averall and Billy Sullivan singled and Bruce Campbell knocked in the tying run with another single. That's when Gomez came in. He walked Greenberg to fill the bases, but got the Tigers out with no further damage until the eleventh.

Little Tommy Bridges held the Yanks to eight hits during the regular nine-inning route and fanned eleven, including Charley Keller three times in a row. But he was betrayed by three errors, two of them being throws to centerfield by Catcher Birdie Tebbetts trying to catch runners at second and one of them a two-base muff by Shortstop Dick Bartell.

Victory to McKain

Archie McKain pitched hitless ball for two innings in relief to get credit for the victory. The combination of this good pitching stopped Joe DiMaggio's hitting streak after he had made at least one safely in 23 consecutive games.

Joe Gordon accounted for three of the Yankee hits, one of them being his nineteenth homer of the season with none on in the second inning.

The Tigers piled up 14 hits against the three New York hurlers and also had the help of two errors by Keller and half a dozen bases on balls.

Buck Worsham Captures Assistant Pro's Championship

Chevy Chase Youngster Shoots 142

Favorite Cards Rounds of 72 and 70 to Win Tourney At Woodmont Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Buck Worsham justified his favorite's role in the Middle Atlantic Assistant Pro's championship yesterday at Woodmont by winning the 36-hole event with a half-dozen shots to spare. The Chevy Chase youngster, who will be 21 next month, put together rounds of 72 and 70 for 142, incidentally the best consecutive medal scores of his career.

Buck was the overwhelming favorite to win and led all the way. His first nine 36 was the best and his morning 72 was a shot better than Raymond Willett's 73. He turned even par 35 on the out nine in the afternoon while the rest of the boys were going higher, and after a shaky start on the first few holes of the back nine he tossed in a few birdies and was back in 35 for the 70.

Four Birdies Helped

Second place went to a dark-horse entry with a famous golfing name from the Terra Mariae Club in Baltimore, Joe Kirkwood, jr., son of the trick shot artist who posted 76-72, 148. Young Kirkwood, just 21 years old and able to pass for Craig Wood in a pinch, is a newcomer to this section, having worked at the Terra Mariae Club just ten days. He was former assistant at the Capital City course in Atlanta.

Willett, 22-year-old host club assistant to Pro Gene Larkin, who was responsible for the tournament, finished in third place after a bad third nine. He was only a shot off the pace in the morning but an out nine of 39 put him too far behind Worsham. He came back in 37 for 76, barely missing an approach shot on the eighteenth that would have tied Kirkwood.

Worsham's victory was worth $60, $35 from the purse contributed by several of the sectional professionals and $25 from the sweepstakes. Kirkwood didn't enter the sweeps and it cost him $15, as he won but $21 for second place. Willett won second in the sweepstakes and third in the tournament purse for $30, while Eddie Stevens, Manor Club assistant, won third money in the sweepstakes for his 74—77, 151, including a third nine of 41.

Another Joe Turns Up

Worsham, four over par for the 36 holes, had four birdies and went over par eight times, including finding two ditches and three-putting one green. Three of his birdies came in succession and were more than anything responsible for his victory, one on the eighteenth hole of the morning round and the first two holes in the afternoon. His putter was working well but he didn't drop any over 25 feet.

The assistant to Bob Barnett at Chevy Chase has been giving his 22-year-old brother, Lewis, Burning Tree professional, a battle for low scoring honors of late and yesterday's fine score of 142 over the Woodmont course won't hurt his rating. He has already finished in the money in several pro sweepstakes this season, in addition to the third in the Bedford Open and second in the Maryland Junior Open.

Several of the older boys had their troubles. Brick Wood, of Washington, finished with 159 after taking seven on a hole where his ball hung up in a cedar tree. "Set" Collinge, of Columbia, ran into a flock of sixes, including one on a par three holes, while Warner Gray, Congressional, was hitting tee shots a country mile but his irons were wild.

Rocky Mount, N. C., July 31 (AP).—Elmer Gedeon's ninth-inning home run gave the Charlotte Hornets a 2-to-1 decision over Rocky Mount tonight and ended a four-game winning streak by the Red Sox.

Volney Burnett Names Inter-City Line-up

Peacock and Rippy to Play in Top Spot For Washingtonians Against Baltimore Sunday at Terra Mariae Club Course

Volney G. Burnett, one of the outstanding amateur golfers of the District who was named captain of the intercity team by local sports writers, announced his 16-man line-up last night for the match Sunday with Baltimore's 16 best golfers at the Terra Mariae Club.

Burnett, the Chevy Chase Invitation chapion, will be on duty in the fire department and unable to get a day's leave for the match, thus his role of "nonplaying captain."

Volney had 28 players to work with in his selection of the best 16, 10 that were selected by all three sports writers, 11 that made two lists and 7 that were named only once.

No. 1 Team From Indian Spring

No. 1 team from the District in the match will be the Maryland State four-ball champions from Indian Spring, Roger S. Peacock and Claude Rippy. State Champion M. Parker Nolan and Bobby Brownell will take on Baltimore's second best duo while other pairings include the Beaver Dam team of Jim Gipe and Eddie Bean and another Indian Spring duo, Jock Olmsted and Jerry Hart.

Ralph Bogart, District champion, is in New York at present and probably will not be back for the match. He was originally assigned Billy Shea for a partner by Burnett, but if he is not here, Harry G. Pitt, Manor, will play with Shea, and Pitt's first partner, George Molloy, will have first alternate, Frank White, of Capital.

Other starting duos selected by Burnett include Columbia Club's two-man team champions, Martin F. McCarthy and George F. Miller, and Columbia's schoolboy champion, Earle Skinker, with Dick Melvin, of Indian Spring, as a partner.

Used All Players

Burnett used every player on the list the sports writers agreed upon, while from the second list of two choices out of three Billy Dettweiler, Maury Nee, Page Hufty, George Vass, Louis Fuchs and Billy Houghton were not named, although Houghton is first alternate, Fuchs second and Nee third.

Any players named that will not be able to compete are urged to get in touch with Burnett at Columbia 3618. There are several he was unable to contact, or were out of town.

The Terra Mariae course will be open for practive rounds today, tomorrow and Saturday. A buffet supper for the team members and alternates will follow the match.

Paul Jones Meets Joe Cox At Turner's

Wrestling Show Also Lists Battle Royal At Arena Tonight

Paul Jones, the big Texan who specializes in a Figure-Four scissors, will go gunning for revenge tonight at Turner's Arena. He will cross paths for the second straight week with Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, in the feature bout.

The wrestling show, which also offers a five-man battle royal, is being held for the benefit of the District cab drivers who are organizing a relief association to provide hospitalization for their families.

Those scrapping in the battle royal are The Golden Terror, the 300-pounder known as Bob Weatherly; Red Russell, finalist last week; Ed Newman and Ed White, two former football players, and Tom Mahoney, a one time prize fighter. The Terror is due to be "ganged up," for the battle royalists love to concentrate on the biggest guy first.

When Referee Casey Berger raised Joe Cox's hand last week at the Stadium, declaring the fall in his favor, most of the 1,000 fans thought Jones was robbed. For Cox had placed his feet against the ropes, and used the ropes to help him put Jones' shoulders down.

In the semiwindup Frank Sexton, of Ohio State, one of the finest prospects to hit this town in a long time, goes against Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain. Joe Dusek takes on Warren Bockwinkle in another 30-minute duel.

The Futurity, to be run for the fifty-first time at Belmont Park September 28, originally closed with 1,108 nominations in January, 1938, and since that time the accumulated value has reached $48,400 which plus the $25,000 added by the track and the starting fees should net the winner close to $80,000.

Manor Club Match Won by Bouic's Team

Ray Fleming Stars For Country Line-up; Pitt Bros. Have 76

Albert M. Bouic's "country members" of Manor Country Club ate crabs and drank beer to their hearts' content last night following an 11-stroke victory over Jim Brownell's "city slickers" in the intra-club team match over the Norbeck course.

Sixty-two members competed in the 18-hole medal match and only 11 strokes separated the net scores of the teams at the finish, 2,271 for the winners and 2,282 for the losers.

Ray Fleming, one of the most consistent golfers at the club, starred for the winners with a 74-8, 66, his 74 representing the lowest gross total of the day. Other low scorers for the country team included, A. F. McDougald, 81-13, 68; H. A. Mihills, 80-12, 68; George Landick, 82-14, 68; D. R. Hutchison, 81-14, 67; H. A. Neff, 79-9, 70, and A. L. Alderman, 78-8, 71.

The city slickers had Bobby Brownell and Harry Pitt on their team but they totaled 11 shots too many. Brownell posted a 75, including a 5-4-6 finish, four over par on the last three holes, in his second competitive round since last winter. Harry Pit had a 76 and his brother, Thomas S. Pitt, also posted a 76, with a 10 handicap for a net 66. L. J. Manders tied his score with 77-11, 66, while Frank Butler had 79-12, 67; and Jack Maddocks, 84-17, 67.

The respective team captains played together and scored alike, Bouic 88-16, 72, and Brownell 82-10, 72.

Entries for the annual two-man team championship at Manor Club close Saturday at 4 p. m. with Al Treder in the golf shop. The first round of match play is scheduled the week of August 4.

Rain Interrupts D. C. Women's Net Tourney

Willie Herbert Victor In Only Singles by Downing Dorette Miller

The sudden downpour cut hostilities in the D. C. Women's Tennis League tournament at Rock Creek to two complete matches of the regular tourney yesterday, but in each the favorite came through in easy style.

Top-Seeded Willie Herbert took the only singles victory of the day, a 9—7, 6—0 beating of Dorette Miller. As a result Mrs. Herbert found herself in the semifinals.

In doubles Joan Bransford and Carter reached the finals when they split the first two sets with Bassett and Bageant, 6—1 and 4—6, and then came ahead in the final set to win a thrilling 10—8 decision.

A pair of singles matches was interrupted by the rain. Charlotte Decker, seeded No. 2, earned a draw with Mrs. Margaret Keever in their two-set match, each taking a 6—4 victory. The affair will be played over, though Mrs. Peggy Smith and Eleanor Voith will pick up action where it was left off yesterday, Mrs. Smith was leading 5—4 in the first set when play was stopped.

Today's program calls for three singles matches and one in doubles in the regular meet. Four consolation matches are also on the card.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Singles—Willie Herbert defeated Dorette Miller, 9—7, 6—0; Charlotte Decker and Mrs. Margaret Keever were rained out after each had won 6—4 set; Mrs. Peggy Smith led Eleanor Voith, 5—4, when rain caused postponement.

Doubles—Bransford and Carter defeated Bassett and Bageant, 6—1, 4—6, 10—8.

Consolation singles—Louise Chinn defeated Ann Visak, 6—0, 6—1; Sally Miller defeated Jean MacGregor, 6—2, 6—3; Francis Rowan defeated Betty Zimmerman, 6—2, 6—1; Margaret Gray defeated Katherine Wassmann, 7—5, 6—3.

By the Associated Press

East Hampton, N. Y., July 31.—Sarah Palfrey, of Reno, Nev., and Pauline Betz, of San Francisco, leaders of the draw in the Maidstone Club Invitation Tennis Tournament, reached the semifinal round today with easy victories over highly regarded opposition.

Miss Palfrey turned back Helen Germaine, of New York, 6—2, 6—0, while Miss Betz, who was runner-up to little Sarah for the National Indoor championship last winter, disposed of Pat Canning, of Alameda, Calif., 6—3, 6—2.

Three teams entered the semifinal round of the doubles tournament. Miss Palfrey and Mary Hardwick, of London, led the advance with a 6—3, 8—6 triumph over Margaret Osborne, of Los Angeles, and Katherine Winthrop, of Boston. Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, kept pace by defeating Rita Jarvis, of London, and Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 6—1, 3—6, 6—3.

The third berth was captured by Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., who defeated Helen Bernhard, of New York and Louise Brough, of Beverly Hills, Calif., 2—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Ernie Lain, Of Rice, Signs 'Skin Contract

D. C. Gridders Leave Tomorrow for Coast Training Grounds

A stellar addition to a Redskin backfield corps which already promises to be one of the best in the National Professional League was announced last night as the main body of gridiron Indians prepared for its long jaunt to training quarters in Spokane, Wash.

He was big Ernie Lain, Rice Institute's brilliant runner and passer for the last three seasons. The biggest gun on the powerful Texas eleven, Lain's advent with Washington was highly pleasing to Redskin bosses despite the overflow of good backs. He is only 5 feet 11 inches tall but tips the scales at 230 pounds when in condition.

At the same time Lain's signing was announced, headquarters said that all preparations for the fall training grind had been made by Coach Ray Flaherty, who is already on the West Coast.

Eleven veterans and one rookie will leave Union Station tomorrow evening at 5:10 on the Liberty Limited to head the exodus westward. A total of 46 players is expected at Spokane Tuesday, when drills will be opened.

Of the body leaving here, only Sandy Sanford, former Alabama star, can be looked on as a rookie. The others—Charlie Malone, Don Irwin, Clyde Shugart, Bo Russell, Bob Masterson, Wayne Millner, Vic Carroll, Jim Meade, Clem Stralka and Johnny Spirida—have had their baptism of fire in action.

Christman Recovering From Tonsilectomy

Kansas City, July 31 (AP).—Paul Christman, University of Missouri football star, was recovering today from a tonsilectomy which he hoped would hasten the recovery of a leg injury suffered in a baseball game last spring.

The leg has been slow in responding to treatment, causing him to be concerned regarding his participation in football next fall.

Indians Stage 4-Run Uprising in 8th to Defeat Boston, 12-11

Tribe Stays In Tie for League Lead

Jimmie Foxx Comes Back to Line-up as Catcher; 10 Hurlers Used by 2 Teams

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 31.—A four-run rally in the eighth inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 12-to-11 victory in a slugfest with Boston today and kept the Tribe tied with Detroit for first place.

Jimmie Foxx, who has been out with a leg injury, returned to the Boston line-up as catcher instead of first base. He poled two singles and batted in two runs. Manager Joe Cronin made the move to keep the heavy-hitting Lou Finney at first.

Boston slammed four of the Indians' junior hurling corps and one senior for ten hits, while the Tribe treated five Red Sox likewise for 16 safeties.

Sox Get Four in First

The Sox rapped Joe Dobson for four runs in the first inning, and added two more at his expense in the third, the latter scores coming on a single by Bobby Doerr with the bases loaded.

The Indians opened their scoring in the uphill battle with a five-run blast in the fourth inning, featured by Ken Keltner's tenth home run, with the bases full.

Dennis Galehouse, the Sox's starting pitcher, gave way to Emerson Dickman in this flurry. Earl Johnson, Joe Heving and Jack Wilson followed them to the mound.

Dobson went to the showers after the third inning and was followed by Harry Eisenstat, Johnny Humphries, Bill Zuber and Al Smith.

Three More Added in Sixth

Then the Indians slashed into their stretch drive. They put together three singles and a double for three runs in the seventh.

Roy Weatherly opened the Tribe's eighth with a single. Hal Trosky tripled and scored on Heving's wild pitch. Keltner singled and Ray Mack bounced a ground-rule double into the leftfield stands to score Ken. With the bases walked full, Pinch Hitter Russ Peters singled in the tying and winning runs.

against the right field wall in the first inning. Lewis and Walker were on base with walks. In the second, the Nats came up with four luscious numbers. They batted Kennedy out. McQuinn's muff of a grounder figured in the inning, and so did a double by Rick Ferrell, a single by Chase and singles by Walker and Myer.

Against Auker in the third inning, the Nats scored two very simple runs after two were out. George Case simply doubled against the wall in left and Lewis simply lifted his homer onto the right field roof.

That made the score 8-1, but the Nats wern't quite content. In the fourth they assaulted Bill Cox for two more runs. Three walks, and singles by Bloodworth and Chase figured in the proceedings. They made it 11-1 in the fifth against Cox after Lewis walked. Walker singled, Heftner muffed Travis' grounder and Bloodworth got the run home with a long fly.

Friends Save Old-Time Reds Player From Pauper's Grave

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 31.—They'll carry Phil (Red) Ehret, old-time Cincinnati Red, to something more than a pauper's grave tomorrow.

"Red," as most everyone knew him back at the turn of the century, died early this week in a hospital, but until the 72-year-old retired hurler's last illness, the Hamilton County Home had been his abode.

Mayor James Garfield Stewart will speak—"Not preach the funeral, you understand," he said today, "but just to do what I can for one of the heroes of my boyhood."

"I saw Red Ehret in action in the first big league game I ever watched," the mayor recalled. That was in Cincinnati—and dates the incident either 1896 or 1897, when the tall and raw-boned hurler worked under Buck Ewing.

Ehret would have gon to Potter's Field, had it not been for friends.

He received a small check monthly from a major league fund for indigent players, but aside from that, about the only "gold" he knew was a gold-plated pass to any ball park in the country issued by the National League in token of his long service to the game.

But "Red" seemed not to care for the apportunities to revisit scenes of his earlier triumphs.

Baseball circles recall that not so long ago, a friend suggested that he attend a Reds' game at Crosley Field.

"Havn't got any shoes," he said . . . "Nothin' but these slippers."

Gil Hunt, Wood Eliminated at Meadow Club

Guernsey Downs D. C. Player; Schroeder Beats New Yorker

Southampton, N. Y., July 31.—Two seeded players were eliminated from the Meadow Club Invitation Tennis tournament today and Defending Champion Bobby Riggs barely avoided a similar fate as the field moved into the quarter-finals.

Sixth-seeded Gil Hunt, of Washington, yielded to Frank Guernsey of Orlando, Fla., 8—6, 6—2, and Sidney Wood, of New York, seeded eighth, bowed to Fred Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif., national junior champion, 6—3, 1—6, 6—4.

A match-point drive down the sidelines that was out by less than an inch, cost Eddie Alloo, of Berkley, Calif., an upset victory over Riggs. Bobby was hopelessly out of position, but given the break, he proceeded to cut down Alloo 6—4, 4—6, 7—5.

Riggs will face Hank Prusoff, Seattle giant, who ousted Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3. The other upper-bracket test in the round of eight will pit Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif, against George Toley, of Los Angeles. Kovacs defeated Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, 6—3, 6—2, while Toley downed Bobby Harman, of Berkeley, Calif., 7—5, 6—1.

In the lower bracket, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., will face Schroeder, and Guernsey will meet Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City.

Cooke scored at 6—4, 6—3, over Larry Dee, of San Francisco, and McNeill downed Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles, 11-9, 4—6, 6—4.

Durocher Nicked For $50 on Language

New York, July 31 (AP).—Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Walter Brown, New York Giants' relief hurler, were fined $50 each today by President Ford Frick of the National League for using "profane language" in yesterday's games.

Durocher was banished from the Dodgers-Pirate game last night and Brown from the Reds-Giants encounter in the afternoon, after disputing an umpire's decision.

Bill Ackerman ON FISHING

Voracious Stripers Are Now Taking Trolling Lures

The striper schools that have been raising spasmodically for more than six weeks in the section between Bloody Point Light and Poplar Island have finally decided it is time to feed on the lush schools of alewives that are scattered all over the upper Chesapeake.

ACKERMAN

Because they have, boats have started taking them by way of trolled lures, in place of the chumming with green shore shrimp, which during July and August will raise so many hardheads the rock will not seem to have a chance.

Capt. Bob Lee at Shadyside reports his boats bringing in catches both morning and evening, numbering up to 15 and weighing from four to eight pounds.

The "Hilltop" in this same area is producing fair catches of hardheads—made mostly at night—with a sprinkling of trout. The best catches, however, continue to come from the Gooses and from Solomons to the Middles.

The heat has slowed up not only the fish, but many anglers as well. It is almost impossible to fish through the heat of the day, with the water flat and brassy, and with the fish sulking in the "deeps." We believe the fish will not only bite better with a change in the weather but anglers will feel more like going after them.

We noted several days ago the catch of two broadbill by Norman Windsor, but what we didn't know at that time was he flew from his home at Niagara Falls to New York, hired a cab for the hundred and some odd miles to Montauk at the easternmost tip of Long Island, where after a leisurely breakfast he boarded a fishing cruiser.

Within an hour of the dock, and almost immediately after his skipper had put over a pair of swordfish baits, he had one on. A half hour and two minutes, and a 236-pound broadbill was in the boat. A second bait—a second broadbill was hooked—and almost as quickly a second fish was in the boat.

A new Atlantic coastal record for two swordfish in one day—entree to that famous Two for One Club as the fifth member—for he was the fifth angler in all the world to accomplish this feat—and as he stepped ashore several native anglers just about passed out when he nonchalantly remarked: "First time I ever went salt water fishing."

Louis Louft, local angler, found the fishing at Marathon down in the Florida keys very much to his liking, even though he failed to land any one of the 14 he hooked.

He's back again this year, and doing considerably better—with an 85 and 95-pound pair to his credit as well as a 150-pound jewfish.

Miss Cecelia Kartzinal, also fishing the same area has missed three so far this year although last season she boated one of the Silver Kings topping the century mark by five pounds.

The summer Miami Fishing Tournament, which ends this week, has a Washingtonian, Jack Bane, standing with the best sailfish of the year to his credit—an 80-pounder, and well over 8 feet in length.

Net Deadline Set For Tomorrow

The deadline for entries in the District of Columbia men's singles and doubles tennis championship has been moved back from today until tomorrow, it was announced last night. Action will get under way Saturday at 12 noon, with the draw slated for tomorrow at 5 p. m.

Prospective players may file their entries at Edgemoor Club, where the tourney is to be held, or simply by calling Wisconsin 9704.

Abrams May Sign for Bout With Cocoa Kid

Bout Tentatively Set for August 12 At the Stadium

George Abrams, Washington middleweight who did something the champion in that division, Kenny Overlin, couldn't do—that is beat Billy Soose, is expected to sign either today or tomorrow to meet the Cocoa Kid, No. 1 welterweight challenger, in a 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium Monday, August 12.

Rumors that the two fighters have signed have been branded as untrue by Matchmaker Gabe Menendez.

Menendez says he hasn't received any contract yet from Chris Dundee, Abrams' manager in New York, nor from Cocoa's manager, George Shepherd, of Brooklyn. And down at the District Boxing Commission no contracts regarding an Abrams-Cocoa Kid are on file, Josephine Sawaya, Col. Harvey Miller's secretary, reported yesterday.

Abrams has been in town the last few days visiting his parents in Georgetown. He has been training daily.

The questions of weight and guarantee always can throw the monkey wrenches into the works. Cocoa is a welterweight, Abrams a legitimate middleweight. And Cocoa, who weighs between 146 and 148, isn't going to give away too many pounds.

Galan Injured as Cubs Bow to Phillies, 7 to 3

Outfielder Suffers Fractured Left Knee In Crash Against Wall

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 31.—The Chicago Cub went down to a costly 7 to 3 defeat at the hands of the Phillies today as Outfielder Augie Galan suffered a fractured left knee crashing against a concrete wall. He probably will be out for the remainder of the season.

Galan was chasing a foul fly off the bat of Herman Schulte in the fifth inning when he hit the wall. He was removed to Temple Hospital where X-rays disclosed the injury.

Galan's mishap followed a minor one for Manager Gabby Hartnett. The Cub catcher was struck on the head by Mel Mazzera's bat in the second inning and left the game. He continued, however, to direct the team from the bench.

Whitney's Parasang Wins Saranac Handicap at Saratoga

Favorite Scores By Half Length

Call to Colors Runs Second; Riddle's The Finest, Is Third, In Day's Feature

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 31.—Two members of the Whitney clan, long famous in racing and especially at this ancient turf center, were represented by the first two horses to finish in the 1-mile Saranac Handicap, for 3-year-olds here today. C. V. Whitney's Parasang, the 6-to-5 choice over ten rivals, drove first past the wire by a half length. Call to Colors, sporting the Manhasset Stable silks of Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, sister of J. H. (Jock) Whitney and therefore the winning owner's cousin, was an easy second.

Samuel Riddle's big colt The Finest was a belated third, four lengths behind, while Rollo came from last place to finish fourth.

Parasang, top weight of the lot under 118 pounds, which included Basil James, sped the distance in 1:38 1-5 and earned $4,200 in purse money. The Halcyon colt's lone remaining stake engagement here is the traditional Travers.

Parasang second to He Did in the recent Fleeting Handicap at Empire City, gave Jockey James his second straight success in the Saranac. James booted (Jock) Whitney's Heather Broom home a year ago.

Call to Colors led Parasang by a length or slightly more to the stretch. When James urged the favorite into a narrow advantage entering the home lane, many believed Parasang would score with ease, but Call to Colors offered stubborn resistance to the end.

WHAT'S TO DO, forward factor from start while racing on outside, wore down VEEPEE to take command, but had to be shaken up while tiring approaching finish. VEEPEE had sped to go to front at once, opened good lead and was placed to hard drive when displaced and lacked racing room along rail right at end. ORADATIM raced on inside throughout and was held safe. SLY HEELS had been early speed and showed good effort.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:37. Off 2:39. Winner, Abram S. Hewitt's b. f. ALAMODE, within striking distance from start, saved ground at stretch turn and withstood long drive to be up in concluding strides. OUTRIGGER, slow to begin, worked way to contention on outside, was carried out through stretch by WINDSOR'S CHIEF but for which he would have won. WINDSOR'S CHIEF was sent to contention with bold rush on outside, took command in stretch and bore out to finish, being taken up approaching end. SIMMER, sluggish at start, was sent to leader with rush in stretch and weakened in closing stages.

Daily Double, WHAT'S TO DO and ALAMODE, Paid $3,408.30

TAM O'SHANTER, not hurried in early stages, worked way to leaders on inside, took command while fencing boldly and held ROUGE CATALAN safe while under strong hand ride. ROUGE CATALAN was rated closest to pace of STAR ON, took lead when pacemaker weakened, but could not stay with winner while kept to punishment in final three-eighths. THORNY ROSE had speed for mile and was a weakening third. JACAMAR was held safe throughout.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:44. Off 3:44½. Winner, John H. Bopst's b. g. WILD IRISH, rated when in close quarters early, obtained racing room on outside and closed with rush under punishment to win going away. BOULDER DAM went to contention between horses at far turn and closed with good energy. SMALL CHANGE saved ground while setting pace and weakened suddenly inside eighth pole. BARRACA was bothered by STEALING HOME entering backstretch, moved up menacingly and weakened in closing test.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:15. Off 4:16. Winner, H. C. Vaughn's dk. c. OVERSIGHT, allowed to settle into best stride, came to outside while bettering position, wore down INTELLIGENTSIA and won going away. ROYAL BUSINESS, not hurried early, saved ground to backstretch, responded to urging to better position and closed gamely, but was held safe by winner. INTELLIGENTSIA moved up sharply to take command leaving backstretch and bore out in stretch run. SQUABBLE was shuffled back after a quarter and closed full of run.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:46. Off 4:49. Winner, G. L. Stryker's ch. f. SCULLERY MAID took command at once, saved ground while settling strong pace and was kept to drive to end. WINTONA was hard ridden while close up, could not seriously menace winner, but was best of others. GOLD D'OR lacked speed in opening stages, came wide for racing room and closed resolutely. BUD'S KING closed a gap after saving ground.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:24. Winner, C. Grinbly's blk. c. VICTORY LIGHT, sluggish in early stages, came wide to improve position steadily in run up backstretch, circled leaders entering stretch to set to top and held on with good energy. DRESSMAKER was confidently ridden for three-quarters, swung out and closed with good courage and barely missed. TEPIN forced pace to stretch and faltered.

LEVENA, rated while racing closest to PURR BUCKLE in early stages, came to outside entering stretch, responded willingly to hard drive and outlasted PURR BUCKLE. The latter was sent to front at once, withstood challenge of WAYRIEL and fought it out with good energy. MAMIE'S LAD, outrun early, came with bold rush in closing three-eighths.

Telephone Net Dips in June to $144,140

Increased Expenses, Taxes Overshadow Revenues' Gain

The company's report, filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, showed June operating revenues increased to $1,101,072 as compared with the $1,025,192 for the same month last year. Operating expenses, however, showed an advance of 6.3 per cent, while taxes were $52,222 heavier in the month than last year.

Net income for the six months ended June 30 was reported $18,884 more than in the like 1939 period.

Gas Firm Cuts June Loss

Although June operations resulted in a net loss of $33,066, the Washington Gas Light Co. showed improvement over last year when a net loss of $44,416 was reported in June.

The company's report for June, filed yesterday with the Public Service Commission, showed operating revenues of $540,811, an increase of $20,448 over the same month last year. However, operating expenses increased $19,820 to $533,819.

Remington Rand Plans Leak-Proof Gasoline Tank

New York, July 31 (AP).—James H. Rand, jr., chairman of Remington Rand, Inc., told stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday the company had developed leak-proof gasoline tanks for aircraft, Army trucks and other motorized equipment, and was working on light-weight bullet-proof armor suitable for such combatant units. He said all of the company's facilities had been offered the Government.

In order to obtain numerical superiority in the air quickly, Rand suggested the Government consider production on a large scale of multi-engined airplanes to supplement the output of high-speed planes.

"Such planes may have the speed of only 150 miles per hour," he said, "which is equal to the average speed of all German planes, but it offers the advantage of permitting pilots to learn how to pilot in one-third the time required by high-speed planes. At the same time production of high-speed planes should not be retarded, but rather carried forward to the utmost. . . . This country may not have two years in which to build up numerical superiority in the air."

Subsidies for Merchant Ships Prove Value in War Period

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

The newest, largest and most attractive of American-built ships is all dressed up, with no place to go. The S. S. America, which recently completed its trial run from Newport News, Va., to New York, was built for transatlantic service, but under present conditions of war it will not at this time be used over the trade routes for which it was intended.

In the meantime, the ship, in which the United States Government is heavily interested, though it will be privately operated, has been assigned to a series of West Indian cruises. It is reported that the steamer is booked solidly for the next sailing.

In the time lag which occurred since the keel was laid nearly three years ago until the steamer was completed, "peace in our time" disappeared.

Since world conditions necessitated a quickening of our national defense preparations, there is somewhat changed viewpoint toward American merchantmen. Instead of lamenting that American wage and other standards raise costs to such a level that public subsidies are necessary, it is now widely recognized that such merchantmen as can be converted into auxiliary warships are bargains, because in peacetime they can derive revenues which pay part of the cost of maintenance and depreciation. On the other hand, the regular battleships lean 100 per cent on the public treasury.

Joe Curran, head of the Marine Workers Union, told me that some of the American seamen released from service to the European ports have been absorbed in new runs to Africa and other places.

But in reality it performed a disservice to itself for it merely exiled good management and willingness to continue to invest capital.

Meantime, there is a wasting of capital assets, which are evidently not being currently maintained and renewed. Thus, the continued ability to provide employment on the old scale to oil workers may be imperiled.

The alluring profits which the politicians intended to seize have vanished in inefficiency.

Thus, the Mexican government was a silent partner of the foreign oil interest, with a prior claim on net earnings through its role as tax collector.

There should be a lesson in this experience for all of us.

The blunder of the Mexican politicians lay in their failure to recognize the importance to them of keeping their principal taxpayers in a flourishing condition.

The power to tax, as Chief Justice Marshall perceived, is the power to destroy, but it is folly for a government voluntarily to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Profits, it appears, constitute a reward for efficiency, and when waste and ineptness creep into the administration of properties the alluring margins simply disappear.

Sales Dry Up on Stock Reaction; Paper Issues Strong as List Eases

New York, July 31.—The stock market started today where it had left off Tuesday night, namely, with a good volume of trading and prices headed upward. The pace did not last, however, and a combination of profit taking and liquidation based on fears that the blitzkrieg over England might develop any hour canceled early gains, and the list closed the day down the minute fraction of 0.02 point. Bullish forces welcomed the fact that trading interest dwindled as stocks sold off, and 555,860 shares changed hands.

Business news continued favorable, being featured by earning statements covering the second quarter, which generally have come up to optimistic estimates. One reason these reports have not exerted a more marked effect upon share prices is the current controversy over depreciation and depletion allowances which are to be permitted before computing Federal taxes. Until this problem is solved by Congress, it is impossible to make an accurate estimates of the 1940 earnings of corporations.

Expansions Handicapped

A far more serious consequence of the delay in arriving at a fair amortization schedule, however, is the effect upon the country's defense program. The president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the chairman of the United States Steel Corporation are among leading executives who have recently drawn attention to the fact that the law as it now stands handicaps expansions which are sorely needed.

The manufacture of heavy munitions is not a steady business in the United States. Machines constructed to build big guns and armor plate might be used for three years, but certainly they would be outmoded and rusty long before their original cost had been depreciated on the company's books, a period of 20 years.

Profitless Over 17 Years

During the three years that the machines were producing, the corporation would show profits on which the Government would get its cut by means of taxation. But during the next 17 years there would be no profits, and no taxes, but the depreciation charges would run along as before. There appears to be no sound reason why the full 100 per cent of the cost of expansions, made in order to facilitate the defense program, should not be written off in a short period, after which no further depreciation charges on such expansions should be permitted.

Here is one bottleneck in the defense program that requires nothing more than quick action by Congress. Billions are being appropriated and orders are being sent out, but the orders can't be filled until plants are expanded and corporations do not dare expand for short-term business when depreciation is a long-term charge.

Power Output Soars

Business news yesterday was favorable. Electric power output for the week ended July 27 reached its highest for the year and was 3 per cent above the previous week and 11.1 per cent above a year ago. The weekly summary of the steel industry by "Iron Age" stated that companies are pushing operations up to the limit of productive capacity. Producers are pressing all available facilities into service in an effort to cope with a flood of incoming orders, which are in excess of shipments.

Paper issues were a feature of today's trading and International Paper was the day's most active stock, rising about a point. Steels had a reaction after their strength of Tuesday, United States Steel selling off 1¼, Bethlehem 1⅛ and Republic about a point. Chrysler and General Motors also gave up part of their previous day's gains and fractional declines predominated in the aviation division. Equipments and metals were generally firm to irregularly higher. Telephone advanced 1¾, and Westinghouse more than a point, the latter raising the dividends on the participating preferred and common stocks.

Bonds Drift in But

Listed bonds drifted back toward idleness today after their one-day spell of moderately active dealings. The tone was good in most departments, but only a few issues managed to close up more than a fraction. United States Treasury bonds hovered around former levels, while the modest prospective supply of new corporate bonds occasioned a little buying of outstanding utility, railroad and industrial bonds of best classifications. Both foreign and domestic issues of the speculative variety did well. Turnover was only $4,700,000.

Japanese government bonds were sharply higher on modest trading, but this was attributed by bond experts to sinking fund arrangements. German and Italian bonds were marked upward, and a fairly good performance was given by Canadians and Australians. Issues of the European occupied countries were dull. Argentine and Uruguayan issues were leaders in a general upswing of the Latin-Americans.

Speculative railroad liens were generally in favor in the domestic corporate division, but most advances were fractional. Alleghany Corporation bonds were steady, and utility holding issues also held firm. Some convertible bonds did well, owing to the improved tone of the equity market. International Telephone debentures were in mild demand.

Fabulous Mountain of Copper Uncovered in Arizona Region

By the Associated Press

Morenci, Ariz., July 31.—With a $30,000,000 expenditure, Phelps-Dodge Corporation is removing a veritable mountain of copper—one of the greatest reserves of the red metal in the United States.

Already the cap of the mountain—20,000,000 tons of rock and earth—has been stripped away to uncover the 300,000,000-ton ore body. And this is only the beginning.

Actual production from the huge open pit mine on the edge of this town, is not scheduled until December 1, 1941. By that time more than four years will have been spent in cutting the hill way from the ore body, consrtucting a smelter, mill powerhouse and other plants, a railroad and hundreds of homes for workers.

A graphic picture of the development's preproduction magnitude is given by Phelps Dodge's estimate of the cost of preparing to recover the ore: Advance stripping, $5,360,500; pit equipment, $5,930,000; mill and water supply, $9,480,000; smelter and power plant, $7,100,000; miscellaneous, $919,000. Total, $36,760,000.

The 700-foot thick ore body, estimated to contain 6,500,000,000 pounds of copper, has been reached, and the last layers of waste rock and earth are being stripped away.

Destruction of the mountain to expose the wealth of copper is the most spectacular operation of the development. For three years giant shovels have bitten into the top of the hill, trucks and trains hauling away and filling canyons with the tons of waste and ore will have been removed—100,000 more tons of earth than was taken from the Panama Canal.

The pit from which the copper will be taken is 6,000 feet long and 4,000 feet wide. Railroad tracks on which the ore will be hauled to the smelter wind up out of the great hole on circular levels.

More than 1,300 men are at work on the project.

The mountain of copper is part of a range which in the last 50 years produced approximately $187,500,000 in mineral wealth—and was thought to have been exhausted.

Westinghouse Backlog, Sales Set Records

Unfille Orders Hit $86,386,749; Sales At $115,488,876

By the Associated Press

New York, July 31.—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. announced today its unfilled orders for regular lines of equipment were the largest in history of the company.

The backlog at the end of June totalled $86,386,749 against $52,422,563 a year ago.

A. W. Robertson, chairman, explained the unfilled business chiefly was for peacetime equipment and was exceeded only during the World War when United States military orders raised the total greatly.

Sales in the first six months this year, he said, totaled $115,488,876, a gain of 32 per cent over the comparable period last year.

If Westinghouse receives large armament orders, Robertson stated, new plants and equipment probably will be installed to handle them.

Directors declared a dividend of $1 a share each on the common and preferred stocks, payable August 30 to holders of record August 13. The previous payment on each issue was 87½ cents on May 29.

5 Meat Packers Earn $35,000,000, Or 1.8% on Sales

This was disclosed in the first of a series of supplements to the survey of American listed corporations. The supplement covered Armour & Co. of Delaware, Armour & Co. (Illinois), Cudahy Packing Co., Swift & Co. and Wilson & Co., Inc.

The combined volume of business was $1,947,000,000, a decrease of $28,000,000 from the previous year. Total current assets on October 31 were 4.88 times as great as current liabilities, compared with a ratio of 4.21 a year earlier.

South American business—which has increased with the growth of trade since the start of the war—was rated three times and Pacific business double that of a year ago.

Cotton Futures

New York, July 31 (AP).—Hedge pressure washed out small early gains in cotton futures today, active contracts closing 1 to 2 points lower.

Estimates of the turnover ranged to 25,000,000 yards, chiefly in print cloth constructions. Principal demand came from finishers and converters. Some goods were marked up ¼ of a cent a yard.

The weekly weather report was generally favorable although sections of northwest Texas and Mississippi were reported in need of moisture.

This compared with $5,557,487, or 54 cents a share in the March quarter, and $4,481,136, or 41 cents a share, in the June quarter last year.

For the 12 months ended June 30, net income was $21,898,859, equal to $2.11 a common share, against $16,180,551, or $1.81 a share, in the preceding 12 months.

Edward L. Shea, president, said the electric output of the company's consolidated subsidiaries in the first and second quarters established new records for those periods, and added:

"The present demands for power indicate that factories generally in our territories are operating at a high rate. In the case of our own subsidiaries, for example, their industrial customers in the second quarter used 19 per cent more power than in the same quarter a year ago."

Operating properties of North American, a leading utility holding company, are in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Ohio and the District of Columbia.

In Washington, North American owns a large percentage of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co.

Heavy Supply Drops Refined Sugar Prices

New York, July 31 (AP).—The customarily sweet sugar refiners of America suddenly turned sour today when the Savannah Sugar Refining Co. announced a new price basis for refined sugar lower than ever in the history of the industry.

It took but three words for one prominent sugar broker to sum up the situation that led to the new low prices. He said: "Too much sugar."

Today's price posted by Savannah for its entire southern territory was 4.15 cents a pound, deducting 53½ cents a hundred processing tax, and allowing for the usual 2 per cent cash allowance that rules in 99 per cent of all sugar transactions, the net cash price to the refiner equals 3.5427 cents a pound. The previous low on the same basis was 3.593 cents last July 26 and prior to that the record low was 3.626 cents net cash in 1932 when the present tax was not in effect.

Eastern refiners now get 4.35 cents in their territory which works out to a net of 3.728, or just above the historic 1932 low.

Second-Period Nets Of 300 Companies Show 37% Gain

New York, July 31 (AP).—Profits of the first 300 companies to report for the second quarter of 1940 were 37 per cent greater than a year ago.

The gain was made in the face of increased taxes for defense purposes and despite the fact that most leading corporations charged added taxes for the entire first half against second quarter earnings.

Earnings of the first 300 companies rose to $319,829,000, compared with $232,688,000 in the April-May-June quarter of 1939.

Excluding the relatively stable profits of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., net income of the group was 43 per cent greater than the same period last year.

630,000 Jobless At Work in May

New York, July 31 (AP).—Agriculture and construction absorbed the greater part of 630,000 persons who found employment between May and June, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today. The organization is largely supported by business concerns.

The board said total unemployed in June was 8,199,000 persons compared with 8,829,000 in May. The emergency labor force, which was included in the unemployed total, dropped 276,000 persons from its rolls during the month, the board said.

Steel Mills Add 25,000 Workers During June

New York, July 31 (AP).—The steel industry added 25,000 workers to its pay rolls in June, making the highest total for the month since 1937, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced today.

Average employment for the month, the institute said, was 535,000, compared with 510,000 in May and 451,000 in June last year. The June, 1937, total was 556,000.

Steel payrolls increased to $77,388,000 from $75,184,000 in May and $61,150,000 in June, 1939. Hourly wages increased to 85.9 cents compared with an average of 85.1 in May and 84.8 in June last year.

Canada Revises Exchange Rules

Ottawa, Ont., July 31 (C.A.P.).—The foreign exchange control board, in the interests of those who live on the United States border, has promulgated additional regulations governing the right to carry small sums of money to the United States.

Commuters, transportation employes and certain other persons traveling on business may cross the border without obtaining the usual exchange control permit, as may persons visiting friends in adjoining American towns in cases where no expenditure of funds is involved.

To firms on the border whose business requires that their employes shall make frequent business trips to the United States the board will issue special cards which may be validated by an officer of the firm for each separate trip.

Chicago to Start Cottonseed Oil Futures Trade

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—The Chicago Board of Trade will initiate trading in cottonseed oil futures August 19, officials of the exchange announced late yesterday.

The action followed a survey, headed by Edward A. Green, which found that many factors exist to make the Chicago market a logical one for a large section of the United States cotton territory.

Under rules adopted by the board, the trading unit will be 60,000 pounds or one tank car. The price basis will be in multiples of 1/100 of 1 cent per pound. The deliverable grade will be bleachable prime summer yellow cottonseed oil, or a higher grade at contract price. The hours of trading will be from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., except on Saturday, when trading will be from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m.

Commodities' Trend Mixed; Grains Lower

Heavy Buying Noted In Cotton Fabrics At Firm Prices

By the Associated Press

Irregularly lower prices ruled in the majority of commodity futures markets yesterday but increased sales and higher prices in a few spot staples more than countered the small losses.

Wheat at Chicago ended ⅛ to ⅛ cent a bushel off and corn yielded ⅜ ⅝ of a cent.

Wool tops at New York lost .19 to .23 of a cent a pound; cotton was 5 to 15 cents a bale lower and small minus signs were behind coffee, cottonseed oil, hides, rubber, cocoa and sugar.

On the brighter side were reports from New York's Worth street that more than 25,000,000 yards of cotton fabris changed hands up to mid-afternoon at firm prices. Metal circles in New York also reported custom spot copper sales ⅛ of a cent a pound higher, the third day in succession that such an increase was made by the custom smelters and small producers.

Milwaukee Holds $5,000 Open Today

Bulla, Thomson Lead In Practice for Driving Contest

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, July 31.—Golfdom's great whipped their games into shape today for the opening tomorrow for Milwaukee's first annual $5,000 Open Golf Tournament at the North Hills Country Club.

In practice, Johnny Bulla and Jimmy Thomson, pros known for their mighty distance shooting, gave indication that they would be strong contenders for honors in the driving contest which is to divide attention tomorrow with the pro-amateur best ball matches.

Jim Ferrier, open and amateur Australian champ, called North Hills' velvety greens "the finest in the country." Horton Smith predicted a 275 would be needed to win because of several difficult holes which demanded excellent marksmanship.

Other headliners who reported success on the compact 71-par layout were Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, Dick Metz, Chicago Open winner; Ed Oliver, last week's St. Paul Open victor; Johnny Revolta, and Lloyd Mangrum.

The 72-hole main event will get under way Friday with 18 holes. Eighteen more Saturday and 36 Sunday will finish the contest. More than 200 players are entered.

The Gob Defeats Whitney's Woof Woof

Los Angeles, July 31 (AP).—John Hay Whitney's Woof Woof again failed to hit the winner's circle today as The Gob captured the feature race at Hollywood Park for a $5,000 purse.

The Gob, owned by Movie Executive Louis B. Mayer, held off the closing threat of A. T. Winill's Son of War.

Woof Woof, which won the rich Flamingo Stakes in Florida last winter, finished third, seven lengths back of Son of War.

The Gob ran the route in 1 minute 24 seconds, and paid $5.60, $3.20 and $3. Son of War paid $3.40 and $2.60, and Woof Woof, $3.

Look Where the Tall Corn Grows

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

OUTSIDE SECRETARY HOPKINS' WINDOW—On the insistance of wags at the Department of Commerce, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, running mate of President Roosevelt, went yesterday to examine and give his expert opinion on whether or not the cornstalk growing outside Secretary Harry Hopkins' window was wild or being cultivated. Robert Hinkley (right), Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and other colleagues, said they were mystified by the 5-foot 8-inch stalk. Said Wallace as he looked closer, "Say you've got beans coming up here, too!" Last night the Commerce Department was still professing ignorance as to how the vegetables got there

Sal Bartolo Scores Over Rightmire

Sioux City Fighter Victim of Low Blow; Stopped in Fifth

By the Associated Press

New York, July 31.—Everett Rightmire, of Sioux City, Iowa, was the victim of the New York State Athletic Commission rules as well as of a wallop tonight when he lost on a technical knockout to Sal Bartolo, of Boston, in the fifth of their eight-round fight at the Queensboro Stadium.

Rightmire was unable to answer the bell for the fifth round after being floored by a low left hook a few seconds before the end of the fourth. Referee Al Reich penalized Bartolo by taking the round away from him, but under the New York "no-foul" rule he was required to award the contest to Bartolo on a knockout when rightmire was unable to continue.

The low blow was struck during a fast exchange at close quarters. Rightmire appeared in severe pain as his seconds carried him to his corner and it was more than ten minutes before he was able to leave the ring.

More Children Ready to Sail, Says Lothian

32,000 Seek Passage To U. S., Ambassador Tells Congressman

A "large number" of children are readily available for evacuation from England to the United States in American ships, Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, stated in a letter received yesterday by a member of Congress.

Writing Representative Hennings (Democrat), of Missouri, author of a bill to amend the neutrality law to allow American ships to rescue children from England, Lord Lothian said 32,000 applications for transfer to this country have already been received.

Estimating that the requests would mount to 50,000, he said that "the great majority of these children are from other than those of rich parents."

Lord Lothian pointed out that the British government "cannot assume the responsibility for sending children to the North American continent in British ships unless they are convoyed." He added that there is a lack of convoyed British ships at present.

"It is, however, estimated that about 1,200 children are coming to this continent at their own risk, or rather that of their parents, in the next six weeks," he said.

In hearings on the Hennings bill, which has been reported favorably by the House Foreign Affairs Commitee, it was suggested that the British Government did not want the children to be evacuated.

Representative Hennings commented yesterday that the American Seamen's Union "has volunteered to man and operate without compensation" American ships that would be sent to England if his bill is passed.

Asserting that taxpayers would "not be burdened to the extent of one penny," Hennings pointed out that the cost of the ships and of taking care of the children would be entirely met from private funds.

In answer to the argument that American orphans should be adopted before English children are accepted here, Representative Hennings declared that, in the first place, the English youngsters are not to be adopted; and, in the second place, "there are about 17,000 children adopted in the United States annually and the demand for children for adoption is about three or four times as great."

English Kin Ask D. C. Family to Take Children

The horrors of war have been brought close to a Washington family through letters received a few days ago from English relatives appealing for an American refuge for their children.

"The situation here in England is very grave and we are expecting all the horrors of modern warfare to be directed against us any moment now and so we want to send our children away before it is too late," a Derbyshire woman wrote to her uncle in ashington (names withheld by request).

"Already the bombs are falling and these air attacks will be intensified. This letter is to ask you whether you could possibly take my two grandchildren, Doris' boys, Arthur, 8½ years, and Gerald, just 5 years, into your home."

Sabotage Held 'Possibility' In Camden Fire

City Officials to Hold Inquiry Into Cause Of $2,000,000 Disaster

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., July 31.—An inquiry that will review the "possibility" of sabotage was outlined tonight while firemen searched Camden's $2,000,000-fire ruins for the bodies of seven missing persons.

Mary W. Kobus, municipal safety commissioner, said she had heard such reports and declared "they will be given serious consideration."

Officials of the R. M. Hollingshead Paint Co. plant—working on a paint order for the Army and Navy in addition to its vast paint and wax business—were skeptical, however, that yesterday's series of explosions and fire were anything other than accidents.

Four or five others unaccounted for—as shown through inquiries by relatives to hospitals and relief centers—but not given up.

All available equipment for checking the factory ruins—still unbearably hot late in the day—was mustered from Camden and surrounding communities.

Working two at a time, firemen in asbestos suits and gas masks stepped into the mass of twisted steel and steaming bricks about midafternoon to begin the search for bodies of chemical vats kept those without masks at a distance.

Louis R. Wallace, factory personnel director, expected that bodies would be found at the bottom of the debris because the first explosion occurred in the basement where 35 were at work.

Other employes said they had seen the four missing girls there.

There were a large number of tanks of chemicals in the basement," Wallace said. "One of these blew up."

While relief agencies provided shelter, food and clothing for the homeless, WPA workers cleared debris from the streets. Downtown Camden traffic still was hampered. House furnishings and other possessions saved from the burned dwellings were stored in a municipal building.

Sixty National Guardsmen, who patrolled the fire district last night, were released early today—but were recalled this afternoon because crowds and traffic got out of control again.

Pittman Hails Havana Pact On Colonies

Agreement Bolsters Monroe Doctrine, Senator Believes

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night hailed the agreement reached by the 21 American republics for protection of European possessions in the Western Hemisphere against seizure.

Declaring "Secretary Hull has done a wonderful job," the Nevadan said the agreement would "force upon the proposed transferee the burden of attack." He expressed confidence that no European power "desires to be put in that position." Pittman said:

"The main objective of the conference was absolutely obtained. That was the agreement as to taking action either individually or in groups or as a whole to prevent the transfer of islands and other areas in the Western Hemisphere from one European power to another. The agreement was particularly effective in that it was understood that the action might be taken on a threat to transfer without having to await the actual occurrence.

Listen! with Glynn

It isn't the heat that causes that frustrated expression these days on the usually cheerful face of WJSV's production director, Barry Blake. It's another result of this machine age.

First you should know that the said Mr. Blake has long had a hobby which amounted to a fixation. You said "sound effects" to Mr. Blake and a startling gleam would appear in his eyes. He'd spent months dreaming up ways to make things sound over the radio as they really do sound without benefit of microphone, which often distorts their naturalness.

Say a gurgling effect would be called for in a radio script. Next thing you know glasses would be missing all around the station. You'd track down Mr. Blake and you'd find him surrounded by them, that mad light in his eye, experimenting with the varying degrees of gurgles.

But Mr. Blake was happy. The catalogue of his sound effects was prodigious. So what happens! WJSV's new sound effects machine arrives—something that puts anything thought of by Rube Goldberg to shame, capable of producing any possible sound effect by a simple twist of one of its multitudinous dials. So what do the rules say. They say only an engineer can operate it. Mr. Blake is a production man, not an engineer. It's a hard world.
